FRANCE.

Meeting of the Late Ministerial Appointees—Condition of the Bank of France—Peace Chats for the Communists—Scenes at Paris Journals.

PARIS, June 2.—The Paris Journal considers the appointment of M. LEFRANC to the Ministry of the Interior, and of M. FERRY to be Minister of the Seine, to be the reply of M. THIERS to the intrigues of the Orleanists. A letter from the Sub-Governor of the Bank of France states that he was forced to advance various sums of money to the Commune. No armed force, however, entered the bank, and none of its securities were destroyed, thanks to the courage of the members of the Commune remaining in Paris, of the employes of the bank, and of M. BESLAY, a member of the Commune. Two thousand Communists will be imprisoned in the Bulks at Cherbourg. Six hundred have already arrived at that port. The Siècle advocates extensive decentralization of the administration. The Journal des Débats expresses its astonishment at the persistency of the Assembly in holding aloof from Paris.

Abrogation of Proscription Laws Proposed in the Assembly—Case of the Brothers—Rochefort to be Tried Case of the German Army Near Paris.

VERSAILLES, June 2.—In the Assembly, today, M. BRUNET moved the abrogation of laws of proscription as incompatible with Republicanism, and subservient only to dynastic passions and hatreds. Urgency for the motion was voted. Several members of the Right moved the abrogation of the laws specially directed against the Bourbons. One of the Deputies speaking in support of the motion, confirmed the report of the fusion of the two branches of the House of BOURBON. A resolution of urgency was adopted. The question of the validity of the election of Prince DE JOINVILLE and Duke D'AUMALE will be discussed on Monday next in the Assembly, when it is probable the fusion of the two branches of the House of BOURBON will be announced. The discussion upon the eligibility of the ORLEANS princes will be given in the Assembly on Monday. HENRI ROCHEFORT is to be tried by military commission to-morrow, on the charge of inciting civil war and pillage. The search for concealed arms continues in Paris, and is of the strictest character. The French Press still discuss the question of the future character of the Government, and are nearly unanimous for a republic.

LONDON, June 2.—A dispatch from Havre, yesterday, says 8,000,000 of francs have been paid to the Germans for the maintenance of their army in the vicinity of Paris. Insurgent prisoners are arriving at Rouen. M. VICTOR HUGO is in London.

DESPERATE CONSPIRATORS.

The Real Incendiaries of the Commune and Instigators of the Conflagration of Paris—A Plot to Burn Other European Cities.

PARIS, June 2.—It has been discovered that the real leaders of the Commune were KARL MARX, JACOBI, BLANQUI, TOUMATCHIE and DIERNECK. The idea of burning Paris originated with JACOBI and TOUATCHIE. Papers have been seized, which show that these men are in London, and are now planning new schemes, designing to make Lyons, Marseilles, Madrid, Turin, Rome, Naples, Vienna, Moscow and Berlin, scenes of conflagrations. ROSSEL and AURIEL are both concealed in London. Assassinations continue.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

The Pope's Contribution to Suffering Parisians—Thanksgiving Day in German—Dissolution of the Portuguese Cortes—Removal of the Italian Capital—New Turkish Loan.

FLORENCE, June 2.—The Chamber of Deputies has resolved to pass all urgent bills prior to the removal of the Capitol to Rome.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 2.—A Turkish loan of £6,000,000 sterling has been concluded, the payment of which is guaranteed by the Egyptian tribute.

SPAIN.

The Religious Question in the Cortes—Church and State—Arguments in Behalf of the Restoral of the Temporal Power—The Catholic Panacea.

Madrid (May 14) Correspondence of the London Daily News.

As might be expected, the presence of three of the Bishops in the Senate has reopened the religious question, in an interesting series of debates. The Bishop of Cuenca commenced with an amendment to the answer to the royal speech, which that assembly is now discussing. The answer is a simple echo of the speech. One of its clauses is this:

Very pleasing would it have been to the Senate that relations with the Holy See should have been re-established, and they trust they will not have to be waited for long. The Senate are sure they rightly interpret the general opinion, by assuring themselves with the sincere desire of your Majesty, so proper to the head of a Catholic nation, of obtaining a Concordat with the High Pontiff.

The Bishop of Cuenca proposed to add the words:

This can, without doubt, be accomplished by giving to the common Father of the faithful just and proper satisfaction, and by working jointly with the other Catholic Powers, until he is restored to the full and tranquil possession of his temporal dominions.

BISHOPAL ARGUMENTS.

As the Bishop occupied nearly two days in his speech in support of this addition, it is impossible for me to follow him through the whole. He said so much in the first clause (that of satisfaction to the Pope for the affronts the revolution had given to Catholicism) that he almost forgot to touch upon the second clause, viz., the co-operation with other Catholic nations to procure the restoration of the temporal power. In commencing, he told the Senate he was what his cloth represented, a Bishop, though unworthy—he was an Apostolical Roman Catholic Bishop, as was the Pope and all the other Bishops of the Catholic Church scattered throughout the wide world. He was, moreover, a Spaniard to the very marrow of his bones, and ready to lose the last drop of his blood for his beloved country. All his aspirations were to contribute to raise her from her present prostration and make her what she once was—the envy and admiration of all other nations. Convinced that Catholicism was the truth, and that it was the salvation of the world, he desired its triumph everywhere, for in its triumph humanity would realize the end of all its aspirations, namely the attainment of the highest degree of civilization. Civilization, according to their immortal countrymen, BALMES, was nothing but the highest grade of morality, wisdom and material prosperity to the greatest number of individuals composing a society or a nation. Catholicism had ever labored for this civilization, to diffuse education and to enlighten the intelligence. He was sorry to see his beloved Spaniards so divided, for these divisions retarded the progress of the car of civilization. He was convinced Spain would only rise when there was union among all, and that could only be on the day they were all Catholics.

FUTURE OF THE NATION.

If the good Bishop believes he will ever see union in Spain, he has a very poor idea of the national politics; if he believes it will be brought about by all becoming Catholics, he is vastly mistaken. Catholic unity, and the desire to maintain it, have been the curse of this country, and are now happily things of the past. Protestantism is too firmly rooted here now to be destroyed, and though it is not accomplishing miracles, it is making a steady progress. Force, or persecution, would be all the more rapid if the good people in England and America, who have sent missionaries here, had sent a little less sectarianism with them. The Spaniards cannot understand the niceties of distinction between Churchmen and Dissenters, Baptists, Methodists, Plymouth Brethren, &c., &c., and they are apt to look upon them as many mortal enemies to each other. The surest plan of working would have been to encourage and foster the native agency rather than to have sent foreigners to preach Protestantism here. But Protestantism is not the only one Catholicism in Spain has to contend with. Freemasons and Deists are spreading much faster, and it will require more Bishops than the Bishop of Cuenca to make headway against their genuine indifference which is their outward manifestation.

THE CATHOLIC PANACEA.

But to return to his speech. He contended that Catholicism had practical solutions for all things, even for politics. After this natural exaltation of Catholicism, he proceeded at great length to quote the articles of the Concordat which the Revolution had violated, and he then went down upon the country the same of God and the displeasure of the Pope. The suppression of the Societies of Jesus and of San Vincent de Paul, the diminution of the numeries, and the demolition of churches and convents, were the cause in the main of outspoken wrath, and were painted out as things to be atoned for to the Pope, or else they could expect a restoration of relations with the Holy See. Coming to the second part of his proposed addition to the royal answer, he urged the importance of the restoration of the Pope's temporal power, as THE Holiness would not exercise his high mission and watch properly over the spiritual interests of the two hundred millions of Catholics in the world, unless he were completely free; and he urged the Government to put themselves in communication with the other Catholic Powers, so that they might exert themselves for the complete restoration to the Hierarch of the Catholic religion of his temporal dominions. He said they should do this first diplomatically, and afterward in other ways if necessary. That is to say, that here we have a Bishop of the Church, who might to be a man of peace, coolly proposing that the Spanish people, with VICTOR EMMANUEL'S son at their head, should go to war with VICTOR EMMANUEL for the restoration of a nominal sovereignty to a decrepid old man. Well did the Bishop merit the terrible scathing he received at the hands of Don CRISTINO MARTOS, the Minister of State, and of Señor Don GOMEZ DE LA SERNA, President of the Supreme Tribunal of Justice. Señor MARTOS declared that what the Bishop asked them to do was a violation of international rights, which it would in no way be to the interests of Spain to commit. The present Government would govern Spain for Spain alone, and not seek alliances of warlike character with any other nations. He denied the right of the signers of the Concordat to impose their ideas on the generations of to-day, and the right of the Church to interfere with the liberty of the people, either mental or physical. As to satisfaction to the Holy See for the act of decreeing liberty of worship in Spain they had none to give. The Pope had not expressed his displeasure thereat. On the contrary, other Catholic countries, France and Belgium, for example, had liberty of worship, and in Rome itself there was a Jews' synagogue and a Protestant Church. As to education it was quite time it was intrusted to other hands than the clergy, seeing the little attention they had bestowed upon it. As to the oath required of the Bishops and clergy—by, even the Pope had said it was lawful and that they could take it. The speeches of the Minister and the Senator were masterly efforts of calm reasoning, without passion and without declamation, and they produced such an effect on the Senate that the Bishop of Cuenca's additions were rejected by 78 to 14.

ANOTHER CLERICAL SHOT.

The next clerical shot was fired by the Bishop of Urgel, in the form of a proposition to add to the answer to the Crown these words:

"Very grateful will it be for the Senate to know that the Government will labor with all possible efficacy for the re-establishment of relations with the Holy See, repairing the injuries and aggravations the Church has suffered in Spain, principally since September, 1868."

The Bishop of Urgel supported his proposition in a long speech, going over much of the ground traversed by his brother of Cuenca. For instance, in asking the indulgence of the Senate for his bad Castilian, he informed them that, with the exception of a visit once made to worship the Virgin of Pilar in Zaragoza, he had never been out of his native Province, Catalonia, and never spoken any other dialect than Catalan. This fact will give your readers an idea of the little amount of learning required in a Spanish Bishop. If no man's education can be said to be complete until he has traveled, certainly this good Bishop must be very defective in knowledge of men and things as they exist now-a-days, if he has only studied them within the narrow limits of one of the forty-nine provinces of Spain. And if the Bishops avowedly admit so much ignorance, can we wonder that the clergy are ignorant too, and that on this ignorance is based the national superstition which the men of the Revolution have done something to remove by decreasing freedom of belief and worship? I do not mean to intimate that all the Spanish Bishops are ignorant and untraveled. On the contrary, I know some of them whose learning is quite on a par with that of Cardinals WISEMAN or MANNING. In the very simplicity of his soul the unsophisticated Bishop of Urgel let the cat out of the bag as to his knowledge of the world, and I trust I have done him no wrong in commenting thereon. If, however, the ability to quote Latin by the yard be any test of learning, the Bishop cannot be as ignorant as his confessions would warrant us to suspect, for, in the course of his long speech, he constantly interlarded it with quotations from the Scriptures and the fathers, all in due sacerdotal Latin. A Senator, who rejoices in the euphonious name of CANTALAPIEDRA, replied to him, and his motion was rejected by 88 to 14.

Bursting of a Balance-Wheel—The Fragments Shatter the Mill and Kill One Man.

From the Detroit Tribune, June 1.

The balance-wheel at WONDERLY & Co.'s mills, Grand Rapids, Mich., burst May 30, instantly killing Mr. WILLIAM ELLSWORTH, who had been a resident of this city but about six weeks, formerly residing at Lock Haven, Penn. He was a young man in the neighborhood of twenty-five years of age, and this day was the first anniversary of his wedding. The accident is supposed to have been occasioned by the belt running off the governor. The engineer, being engaged in another part of the mill at that instant, the fireman, Mr. ELLSWORTH, left his place, and taking hold of the valve, endeavored to shut off the steam; and while doing this, the large balance wheel, running at two or three times its ordinary rate of speed, which was seventy revolutions per minute, burst. The wheel broke into many pieces, smashing and making a complete wreck of the ceiling immediately overhead, thence striking the roof, cutting the rafters and heavy beams, and plowing a regular furrow a distance of thirty feet. Those pieces of the wheel which made their exit through the roof were seen whirling through the air in all directions, some of them being sent far into the river, while a small piece of iron was sent across the river, a distance of eighty rods. Mr. ELLSWORTH was found in a shockingly mutilated condition. The right leg was completely severed at the thigh, the left arm was broken in two places, the bowels were torn out; in short, he was almost literally torn to pieces. The balance-wheel was fourteen feet in diameter, and weighed 9,000 pounds.

Barometer corrected for elevation and temperature.

Synopsis and Probabilities.

WASHINGTON, June 2—4 P. M.—The high wind which prevailed on Thursday evening at Key West still continues, with rising barometer, and has probably extended westward into the Gulf. The cloudy and threatening weather of the Middle Atlantic has extended to the Blue Ridge, with fresh south-westwardly winds, but no rain has been reported. Clear weather has prevailed in the New-England States and on the Upper Lakes. Heavy rains, probably confined to a small area, are reported from Western Tennessee. The area of the highest barometer has continued on the Atlantic coast, and the pressure has fallen somewhat in the Upper Mississippi Valley. Temperature has increased on the East Atlantic and in the North-west.

PROBABILITIES.

It is probable that the high winds in the Gulf will advance with rains to the coast of Louisiana. The weather will probably clear away in the Middle States, and a falling barometer with local rains probably be experienced west of the Blue Ridge. Pleasant weather will probably continue from Wisconsin to the Atlantic.

Sir J. A. Macdonald on the Treaty and the High Commission—Arrival of Swedes for the Maine Colony—The British Squadron at Halifax.

OTTAWA, June 2.—The Times, (a Government organ,) speaking of the Washington Treaty and the explanations expected from Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD, says:

"The Premier considers the time for explanations not yet arrived. He says until the treaty is ratified by Her Majesty, the commission still continues to exist. Until it is disposed of, public discussion on the negotiation at Washington would be obviously improper. With the ratification of the treaty, the power and duties of the Commissioners will cease. Our Premier can then, without impropriety, make such explanation as he may deem necessary. Meanwhile the people of Canada may rest satisfied with the assurance that the reservation of the Fisheries articles for the approbation of our Legislature, is not a mere formal one; that it is quite open to the Parliament of the Dominion to deal with these articles in such a manner as it thinks most likely to be advantageous to the people of this country."

Lord LISGAR, the Governor-General, is going to Gaspe next week on a fishing excursion with Mr. T. REYNOLDS, of the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Railway. Lady LISGAR, with Miss DALTON and M. F. TURVILLE, leave on Saturday en route for England.

ST. JOHN, N. B., June 2.—The steam-ship Acadia, from Liverpool via Halifax, arrived yesterday, bringing twenty-six passengers for this port, and between 200 and 300 emigrants, bound for the Swedish Colony, in the State of Maine, situate near the upper waters of the River St. John. They were landed in good health, and after not more than an hour's detention in St. John, were forwarded by two steamers to their destination.

HALIFAX, June 2.—The British frigates Narcissus, Pylades, and Immortalité, of the North American Squadron, arrived today. Besides the flag-ships, there are now eight war steamers and gun-boats on this station. The fleet will remain about ten days to revictual, &c., and then sail for the Baltic.....The Inman steamer City of Durham will go home today in charge of Capt. JAMISON. Chief Officer HURD will succeed the latter as commander of the Newfoundland boat. The body of the late Capt. MATHEWSON has not yet been recovered.

FREE RELIGION.

Meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston—Addresses by Mr. Frothingham, Mr. Wasson, Dr. Hartel and Others.

BOSTON, June 2.—The Free Religious Association meeting, in Tremont Temple, today, was well attended. Rev. O. B. FROTHINGHAM called the audience to order, rebuking the larger portion for arriving late. He said she Association was not a Boston institution; it was unlimited; it was not even managed by Boston men. The City of New-York, through its public Press, had given the Association a cordial welcome. The leading papers there took the trouble to send reporters to Boston heretofore, and devoted considerable space in their columns for full and accurate reports. The object of the organization at first, he said, was to have every religion on earth represented in the platform. Afterward it became distinctive in its character, with a purpose, and it was not necessary to further enunciate its principles. Cordiality to all religions and hostility to none; wishing to build on the identity of religious life and principles, with all the nobler forms of civill ation. He believed the movement would eventually become a very popular one, as the working minds of the country in the crusable meant business by putting their views home to the people without being aristocratic or exclusive. People were to apply their minds to the subject of religion and politics with an idea of settling upon a more generous basis of faith and action.

Rev. JOHN WEISS was introduced and read an essay on "The Attitude of Science toward Religion." Scientific naturalism itself, he said, was divided into sides; and the independence of the soul of the material body and its permanent continuance, were questions which the greatest minds declined to answer, for the reason that science had not yet put facts sufficient into the case. The latent finite mind, structural and mental, improved by circumstances. Mental states characterized as intuitive, he contended, were more properly be termed digestive; chastity itself became an original virtue, but one formed by obstruction of the pernicious effects of its opposite. Vitality in the human structure, so far as observed, went to disprove the theory of personal continuance after death, though the essayist said he was far from understanding its moral probability. The nature of the Creator was in the material created. Man still shook the tree of knowledge. Women helped him shake it, and the sexes would yet sit in unity and devour the fruits. Religion was simply a recurrence to the human mind of the facts of the universe. Science benedicted religion by blinte at respectful treatment of its facts, thus throwing the pulpit into discredit. Men craved exactness because they had discovered that it was to be the language of the future.

Rev. D. C. A. BARTOL, after a pleasant allusion to WEISS' essay, said the whirligig of time brought about strange changes. Formerly it was a question of the ape and skin to the man. Now, DARWIN said the white man was no better, and placed the two races in one boat. He was not going to attempt to shake off the relationship because the negro was poor, nor because the white man was placed with the animals on a level. Nature was not concealed but revealed by his works. Nature was the crystal through which man saw him. The seven wonders of old, were now seven million wonders. He had no fear of being swamped in physical science. There never was, and never will be any more universe than now existed. Then, when decided texture as only a relic of the fall, found fault with God. Human nature, he contended, was not bad, and he who claimed that it was did not believe in God. Respect for the past should not interfere with progress. The people were too large to get into the churches, and more room was wanted—not for a human body to sit down, but for a human soul to stand up.

Rev. HENRY GERSON, of England, spoke of the manner in which the objects of the Association were viewed in the Old World. He objected to "ticketing" a man before listening to him, and grading his remarks according to previous estimate or reputation, rather than making allowance for any self-improvement he might have made since his last hearing. He said the thoughts that were now coming to the surface in speech were as the thoughts of a child untrammeled by direction in a set course. He was often astonished at what stupid things had been believed. For instance, the world made in six days, and then cleaned out by a deluge; the origin of the human race in a single pair; the confusion of tongues, as if by magic, on one of the steps of the tower of Babel, which, had it reached the height of three times the State-house, was supposed to have been intended to invade the realm of heaven; and above all, the idea of a Being with eyes, nose, mouth and hands looking down upon all our actions. The belief, he said, that pervaded the unthinking minds of Europe in regard to free thinking was that they were atheists, and HUXLEY, TYNDALL and others shared the obloquy of the belief. For himself, he desired to find the truth he could, and preach from his pulpit without regard to the narrow limits of any church. He advised the Association to be not too anxious to answer questions. If it had a work to do it would do it, even if a portion of that work was not made thoroughly plain, even to the teachers. A man must doubt in order to be prepared to believe, and a second doubt was indication of a better belief.

WM. H. SPRINGER said all knew what an unwelcome visitor science was considered in former ages of religion. It was hated, feared, and at every new discovery was persecuted. Now, it would be acknowledged by thinking people that science helped religion, ennobled it, though sectarians were slow to recognize the aid, because it overturned some of their pet theories of origin, &c. Science was a knowledge of the law, and religion a faith in law.

Col. T. W. HIGGINSON spoke of the luxury of a religion that did not degrade men, and how much that luxury depended upon the absence of the elements of fear. "Hell fire" was a great drawback to religion, and men were not strong when they accepted it. The universe as it was, with a fearlessness of results in its acceptance as it was, was the secret of men's freedom of belief. If atheism was true, who would not accept it. Whatever might come from science let it come. If man was morally certain there was no heaven beyond the grave, he had the present, and let him be thankful for it. The only danger from science at present was that it might raise up a hierarchy of conceited professors over a hierarchy of conceited and narrow clergymen. The aristocracy of science was the king of today; it was the lying force instead of the dead force. A few words for woman suffrage, and a reference to anti-slavery agitations of a few years past, closed Col. HIGGINSON'S speech.

GERMAN AFFAIRS.

The Peace of Frankfort—French and German Sentiment—Prince Bismarck on the Maine—A Congratulatory Banquet.

From Our Own Correspondent.

[BERLIN, Saturday, May 13, 1871.

The 10th of May, 1871, has become a day of historic consequence, one of the momentous epochs in the annals of modern history. The happy solution of the negotiations has taken every one by surprise. The interval between the signing of the preliminaries (26th February) and the actual conclusion of peace is not, indeed, an exceptionally short one, but the negotiations at Brussels were being so hopelessly protracted that it seemed doubtful if they would lead to any result at all. The Germans were very much out of humor with the French, and laid the blame entirely to their charge. Hints, and more than hints, from official quarters were not wanting that Prussia was growing impatient, and the Press and public opinion were very explicit on that point. On the other hand, the French complained that their proposals and objections were hardly heeded, and that the German representatives dictated the terms, utterly regardless of their assent or disapproval. The Gaulois published some articles emanating from the negotiators on this subject, written in a most plaintive strain. The French seem, however, after all, not to have been exclusively in fault, for from Prince BISMARCK's own words it appears that the speedy termination of the Frankfort negotiations is solely due to the concurring spirit of Messrs. FAVRE and POUYER-QUERTIER. M. BISMARCK proceeded to Frankfort with the object of removing some difficulties that his subordinates at Brussels were unable to cope with. He left Berlin on the 8th, unexpectedly enough, for the proposal of an interview came very suddenly, with the intention of returning on the 9th. Same new pressure was considered necessary to be put on the French; to such they had hitherto in every case yielded readily enough. M. BISMARCK's speech on the 24 inst.—on which I commented in my last letter, and which left no doubt as to the speaker's determination—was almost instantly followed by the payment of the money due for the sustenance of the German Army. Its force appeared now to be spent, and a new spur was needed. The German Chancellor was going to apply it, but finding the French in so yielding a mood, he signed the peace at once as early as the 10th. How little we were prepared for this you may guess from the fact that some of our leading papers, i. e., the Vossische Zeitung, published the Frankfort telegram announcing the welcome news, at the foot of an article setting forth the impossibility of the very event. The telegram had come just as the paper was being printed. The Danzig Gazette even prefaced the telegram by a violent attack on BISMARCK as a statesman, capable, indeed, of conducting war, but not of making peace. The peace itself is hailed by the public as a gain to Germany. The Press displays an animosity against France that is altogether unjustifiable, and by which it wrongs the German character as much as it disgusts foreigners. The same spirit is not observable in the higher, best educated classes, who have last enough to abstain from cheap abuse. They endeavor to be fair to their vanquished foe, and the moneyed classes—plainly doubting the ability of France to bear the heavy burden far more than the French themselves—were willing to deal leniently with the impoverished State, and even to advocate a reduction of the terms. Government was unbending in its demands, upholding the preliminary terms to the very letter, determined, perhaps harsh, in its expressions, but it was not abusive. Its harshness may be excused; it had to treat the matter in a spirit of business on behalf of its country, and might hardly be swayed by generous sentiments. Different from both these, and contrasting most unfavorably with the present moderation of the French, the German organs of public opinion attacked France with a severity and malice that it is painful to witness.

PRINCE BISMARCK IN FRANKFORT.

Prince BISMARCK's reception at Frankfort was enthusiastic. By his own account he could not intentionally have made that city the "city of peace," as he calls it, for he never knew that he was going to conclude peace at all. But he turned the coincidence to excellent account. He was not formerly popular in Frankfort; if ever man was unpopular anywhere, M. BISMARCK was so in the former free city. He had spoiled her of her freedom; he had made her Prussian, and if you were to think that these injuries had been forgotten in consequence of the glorious victory, I could show you papers but lately published there, which disunctly refute this belief. If there there was a seat of disaffection in Prussia, it was Frankfort. But now all is changed. The Frankfort Journal, indeed, a very fierce party paper, sneers at the fine words bestowed on the wronged city, but it does so more from habit than conviction, and the population does not follow it in its cynicism. The Chancellor's arrival was so sudden that no preparations could be made for his reception. Still, the telegraphic message summoned some enthusiastic patriots to the Hanau terminus, where they loudly cheered the Prince. The Chancellor had ordered the "Swan" Hotel to be reserved exclusively for his use. Some travelers were turned out, with perhaps unnecessary severity, and the public table d'hôte was, of course, likewise closed. Nobody was admitted but on business. Still, the house was full and busy. The French negotiators lodged in the "Russian Court" Hotel. They were not, I am ashamed to say, very well received. The public had been led to believe them to be wantonly delaying the final settlement, and hardly concealed its consequent displeasure. M. FAVRE has grown very gray in the last months, and seemed to have lived years in as many weeks. The negotiators drove about in the city, saw the horse-show, but the public hardly noticed them. The landlord and bankers refused to take their republican paper currency, except at a heavy discount, and on their producing gold, the old Napoleons were carefully picked out in preference to the new republican pieces. Only when, after signing the peace, Messrs. FAVRE and POUYER QUERTIER left the "Swan," the public respectfully made way for them, and uncovered. It seemed to have a presentiment that peace was signed, and that was its manifestation of gratitude. The French plenipotentiaries at once left Frankfort, the very same evening, proceeding via Mayence and Coblentz—where they visited the prisoners' camps—to Cologne and on to France. M. POUYER QUERTIER to Rouen, M. FAVRE straight to Versailles. The Germans, with their proverbial accuracy and minuteness, have already had a quarrel over the exact second when the memorable document was signed. It was about 2½, after which the gentlemen lunched together, and the French left the "Swan" at about 4½. M. BISMARCK soon left his hotel also, to visit some friends. The streets were crowded. Altogether the public has been so obtrusive in its show of attachment and loyalty, as to force the Chancellor, when desirous of taking a quiet walk by himself, to ride miles out of town in his carriage. Though M. BISMARCK is originally a landwehr officer, i. e., a civilian liable to military service in war, and has only lately (in 1860) been raised to a generalcy in order to save him the humiliation of figuring in camp as a sub among the Emperor's spatulated retinue, he has an extraordinary fondness for military dress, and thus wore also in Frankfort, his habitual cuirassier's uniform. Passing through the crowd on that memorable afternoon he seemed to forget that he had his military cap on, and instead of touching it in the orthodox military fashion, he took it off as you would your hat. This gave rise to much laughter and merriment.

A CONGRATULATORY BANQUET.

In the evening the Chancellor followed an invitation to a festive dinner at the Mayor's, M. MUMM. Only twenty-two guests were asked. M. BISMARCK is a great favorite at such private parties. What in a humbler person would be bad manners, is in the hero of the age charming nonchalance and naiveté! The Prince talked more freely of the business of the day than is his wont, and the journalistic telegraph seems to have intruded its wire even into M. MUMM's dining-room. The premature disclosure can hardly be grudged us; we get our news very late, generally when they are too old to excite interest, and if we had not M. FAVRE's account now via England, we should know no more about the treaty than what M. BISMARCK said in Parliament. The official paper has not yet printed a word. M. BISMARCK has visited many private persons, old acquaintances of his, at Frankfort, and that has very much increased his popularity. At M. MUMM's he was greeted in a long festive oration by that dignitary, followed by hearty cheers, accompanied by the draining of twenty-two bumpers of M. MUMM's own sparkling champagne. The Mayor complimented the Chancellor and his glorious, historic and patriotic achievements, and assured him of the loyal attachment of the Frankforters. With what might appear blasphemy were it not copied from history, M. MUMM borrowed a little from the Bible, hailing M. BISMARCK, as Gedof has been hailed before, the "Prince of Peace." M. BISMARCK in his reply denied his particular apprehension of the reception he had met with, and of the fact that the peace had been concluded in Frankfort, the ancient imperial city. He expressed a hope that the peace would prove to have been concluded not only in, but also with, Frankfort. Rather tasteless, I should say, but the Frankforters did not think so, and rather considered the allusion a great honor. Great bids have been made to the landlord of the "Swan" for M. BISMARCK's bed, table, chair, pen, ink and the sand-box which, true to German custom, did duty for a blotting pad, but he has not parted with them. This is not patriotism, but speculation. He hopes to realize money in Germany, where curious Americans and English will throng his hotel, look at the things, and finally pay as many pounds as the Germans offer thalers.

The new departure is not acceptable to many Kentucky Democrats. One of their organs says: "We are not, as yet, prepared to dine upon such humble pie, with its predominating constituent of dirt, nor do we recognize the necessity for any new departure."

Letters received in Washington say that Senator GOLDTHWAITE, of Alabama, was taken seriously ill with pneumonia and disease of the spine, shortly after his return home, and that his mind was also affected. He is now lying in a critical condition.

A West Virginia man has published an advertisement in the only paper in his town which reads: "If the lady (!) who has been using my coal for the past few months will please call upon the next neighbor for her future supply, she will much oblige, as my stock is about exhausted."

It is intimated that Rev. ALFRED P. PUTNAM, of Brooklyn, will probably be a leading Professor in the new Unitarian Theological School in Chicago, and that his congregation, that of the Church of the Savior, will invite Rev. ROBERT LAIRD COLLYER, of Chicago, to their pulpit.

Reports from all parts of Nebraska enable the Omaha Tribune of the 30th ult. to say that there was never, in the history of the State, a better prospect of an abundant harvest than now. The smaller grains especially are looking well, and corn is "fairly jumping" during the warm days of alternate sunshine and shower.

A Southern Democratic paper of some sagacity thinks that if Northern Democrats are going, for the sake of individual success, to indorse all the Radicals have done, and to come on their platform for the sake of getting Northern votes, it might be better for the Southern Democrats to make their bargains with the Radicals themselves, and obtain all the benefits to be derived therefrom.

"Now, my friends, having already said more than I intended, it only remains for me to say how happy I am to see the evidences of prosperity that now surround you. I rejoice in these evidences of assiduous, earnest labor in things material, because there is little in this that a foreign Government can interfere with." Thus spoke JEFFERSON DAVIS to the people of Atlanta, Ga., on the 27th of May. By a "foreign Government," did he mean the Government of the United States?

WILLIAM R. SCOTT, one of the two infatuated young lovers who took poison together in Lawrence, Mass., has until recently lived in Worcester, having come thither from Milford, where his parents reside. The Spy says he is a young man of prepossessing appearance, steady and industrious in his habits, and strongly liked by his acquaintances. Loving and affectionate in disposition, the two were led to the rash act of self-poisoning by the purest love for and attachment to each other.

A letter from Mississippi, published in the Rochester Union, gives a somewhat curious account of the reopening a few Sundays ago of a church which had been closed for ten years. We quote a portion: "Ladies in riding habits at church in Rochester would be a novelty; but here we see them strolling about resting from a hot ride under the Southern sun. Negroes, too, in holiday attire are grouped under the spreading branches of a monster live oak tree, hat in hand, anxious spectators of this unusual gathering, reminding them of their former slavery. Some few parties come in carriages which are almost unknown in this country. These are the land-holders and the aristocracy. Bishop GREEN arrived with Col. CHRISTOPHER HAMPTON. As we entered the church, we were surprised by the intimate resemblance it bore, both by its people and its decorations, to the English country churches. There, still preserved, was the same red curtain seen in all the Episcopal churches of England, dividing the vestry-room from the auditorium. The Southern planter resembles the English country gentleman. Gen. WADE HAMPTON and his brother CHRISTOPHER HAMPTON, both in form, feature and dress, are fair types of the English gentleman. Large square shoulders rather inclined to portliness, with the English cut of beard, and dressed in walking jacket, soft felt hat, yellow gloves, and carrying a small riding whip, really these people look like English aristocracy rather than Americans."

THE SOUTH CAROLINA KUKLUX.

The Cold-Blooded Murder of the Wounded Man, Faulkner—Testimony at the Coroner's Inquest.

From the Columbia (S. C.) Union, May 31.

On the 25th inst. there appeared in the columns of this paper an account of the murder of FAULKNER, the Newberry Kuklux, by some persons unknown. The following report of the proceedings of the Coroner's inquest upon the body of the murdered FAULKNER will set all doubts at rest. FAULKNER was lying at the house of a Mr. WILLIAMS, in Edgefield County, attended by his wife, and, it is said, was about to be moved to North Carolina, intending, no doubt, to forfeit his bail and leave the State. The evidence discloses a cold-blooded murder, and is as follows:

The acting Coroner who held the inquest was Mr. L. COLDBRATH, Trial Justice, and the foreman of the jury was Rev. JOHN TRAPP. Mr. J. C. WILLIAMS testified as follows:

That a man came to his father's house on the evening of the 20th inst. and said he wished to see a Mr. FAULKNER, who, he understood, was in the woods. He said he had a message for Mr. WILLIAMS that his business was to apprise the wounded man that his whereabouts was known, and also of the danger he was in if he remained any longer in his present condition; that he came as a friend, and asked Mr. WILLIAMS if he could loan him a wagon to carry away the wounded man. After some conversation with the stranger Mr. WILLIAMS returned to the house and acquainted Mr. FAULKNER with what the stranger had said, and at the same time asked Mr. FAULKNER if he must let him come in. Mr. FAULKNER said "Yes, let him come in." The gentleman entered the yard and told the gentleman he might come in and talk with Mr. FAULKNER. When the gentleman arrived at the door of the room where Mr. FAULKNER lay, he requested to speak privately to Mr. FAULKNER. So Mr. FAULKNER requested myself and Mrs. FAULKNER to retire, which we did.

After a short time he came out of the room and went toward the gate. As soon as the gentleman left the room, I entered and asked Mr. FAULKNER what he thought of the stranger. He replied, that he thought he (the stranger) was his friend, and that he had gone out to bring in a person whom he knew. The stranger gentleman again entered and said he wished to deliver a message he had from the gentleman who was at the gate. So Mr. FAULKNER asked myself and his wife to leave the room again until the stranger delivered the message. The stranger remained in the room a short time, and when he came out, asked me to accompany him down to the gate to bring back the horses; I went until he and the other gentleman came in and saw Mr. FAULKNER together. So I walked with him down to the gate, but saw no horses. Just as I was passing through the gate, up rose three men, who presented pistols at me, and told me if I attempted to move they would shoot me dead. I told them I would obey their commands. The gentleman who came with me from the house, beckoned to one of the four men who were at the gate. The two men ran to the house, rushed into the room, and fired two shots at Mr. FAULKNER, both of them taking effect, one passing through his head and the other through his abdomen. Immediately after the ports of the pistols, the two men ran with all their might down to the gate where the other three men were, who had me in custody. I was then told to go to the house. The five men then ran off with all their might. I then hastened to the house, and found Mr. FAULKNER a corpse. I did not know any of the men.

The evidence of Mrs. FAULKNER was very short, the substance of which is as follows:

Mrs. FAULKNER was in the room when a strange person came in and asked my husband to have me hide my face; I left the room by the request of Mr. FAULKNER; after the stranger left the room, I returned to the room where Mr. FAULKNER was, and asked him what he thought of the stranger; he said he thought the man was his friend, but that he was afraid of the party, but said the gentleman was going to bring in another gentleman by the name of TAYLOR, who lived at Saluda Old Town, and that they were to remove him (Mr. FAULKNER) four or five miles to-night, and that they had a spring wagon to carry him, but that she must not go along with him, as they were to take him (Mr. FAULKNER) to North Carolina, and that she could follow in a few days; that she would be informed of his whereabouts. Old Town, said that they were to remove him (Mr. FAULKNER) four or five miles to-night, and that they had a spring wagon to carry him, but that she must not go along with him, as they were to take him (Mr. FAULKNER) to North Carolina, and that she could follow in a few days; that she would be informed of his whereabouts. Old Town, said that they were in this district. No effort has been made to search out and bring to justice these murderers, neither would any attempt this, for the civil law is wholly in the hands of the Democrats, and no constable could be found to arrest them, neither jury to convict, as they may be composed of the very criminals themselves. It is said by more than one Democrat living near, that "this man was served aright, and all the other Republicans ought to be the same."

My husband's life is threatened, also that of our friend, a clergyman, formerly of New-York, because they are Republicans, and are considered men of influence, and too kind to the negroes, sometimes teaching and preaching to them. We have our houses guarded at night, and dare not sit on the piazza after 8 P. M. I am anxious through the day, and often sleepless through the night. I would the "Democratic New-England editors" you speak of could have passed the last few weeks here with their families, and shared our experiences. I think if they had, they would not again, as they now do, cry "Peace, peace, where there is no peace."

A Poor Man Wins $25,000 in a Lottery.

From the Milwaukee (Wis.) Sentinel, May 29.

The morning train of the Northern Division of the Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway yesterday brought to this city Mr. W. L. CARVER, of Reedsburg, the winner of the $25,000 prize at the recent Gift Concert of the Musical Society. The gentleman took rooms at the Kirby House, and soon after informed Mr. HIRAM A. CHASE, one of the proprietors, that he was the fortunate man, and that there might be no mistake, displayed the winning ticket. He is a quiet, unassuming man, about thirty-five years of age, rather slight and wiry in person, dark hair, sandy complexion, and auburn whiskers closely trimmed. He was born in Auburn, Cayuga County, New-York, and at an early age moved to this state with his parents, settling upon a farm near Delevan. Following his calling he earned enough to purchase a farm near Reedsburgh, where he resided up to a short time before the breaking out of the war, when his desire to enlist drew himself for the business of life led him to this city. While here, the war of the rebellion commenced, and he enlisted in Capt. HIBBARD's Zouaves, Company B, Fifth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers.

After the war he settled upon his farm, where he lived in comfortable circumstances until the hop-growing mania reached his section; in this he stated his all, and awoke from the delusive dream of fortune, a poor man. The blow though a very discouraging one, did not cumber, but the blue-eyed maiden of destiny. He married the support of a wife and three children with the same devotion and earnestness of purpose which had marked his career at the outset, and was engaged in hauling stone when the news of his good fortune reached him.

Mr. CARVER, as a subscriber of the Sentinel, saw the advertisement of the gift concert, and through his short residence in this city before the war of the rebellion was acquainted with the worth and character of the men interested in the enterprise. He conferred with his family as to the expediency of expending money for tickets, and after considering the matter for several days concluded to purchase three tickets. He sent a letter to Mr. H. N. HEMPSTEAD, the general agent, and received a prompt return. He subsequently disposed of two of the tickets, choosing the number which has proved to be the card to fortune.

A NOTED INDIAN HUNTER.

His Recent Death at the Age of One Hundred and Two Years—A Thrilling Adventure with the Savages.

Correspondence of the Pittsburg Commercial.

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio, May 25.—A few weeks ago a most extraordinary character and venerable pioneer died at Bridgeport, a few miles below this city, and immediately opposite the City of Wheeling. I refer to JOSEPH WORLEY, whose early history and subsequent career have been so intimately connected with the frontier annals of this section of country, that it is a wonder that his death has been unnoticed by the local Press.

JOSEPH WORLEY was born in 1769, just 102 years ago. His reigitrves say that his birthplace was at West Liberty, in Ohio County, now West Virginia, but it is certainly true that whether born there or not, his early childhood was spent in that locality, which is not more than twelve miles distant from the spot where he died. At the time of his birth, this part of the West was an unbroken wilderness. WORLEY, from his earliest childhood, discovered an aptitude for frontier life. He was particularly skilled in the use of the rifle, and all his early thoughts and plannings had reference to the savage foes that surrounded him. The numerous expeditions for which he was chosen showed the confidence his fellow-pioneers had in him. SIMON GIRTY, the notorious white renegade, was at this time with the Indians on the Sandusky plains, and frequently headed their marauding raids upon the settlements. It was the aim of the settlers to vanquish this most formidable foe, and Mr. WORLEY, with others, undertook the task of capturing him. In this work Mr. GIRTY, at the head of the Ottawa warriors, was pursued across the Ohio at Meigs Island up the waters of Cross Creek, and far into the interior of what is now the State of Ohio, his pursuers enduring privations and encountering perilous difficulties, but always unsuccessful in his capture.

Some time early in life WORLEY and his brother JACOB, who seems to have been as heroic as the other, drifted toward Fort Henry, occupying the point where Wheeling now stands, and there they became acquainted with the famous LEWIS WETZEL, one of the most noted Indian hunters of American pioneer history. WORLEY, who was several years WETZEL's junior, was his very intimate friend, and his almost constant companion in the woods. On one occasion, having discovered fresh evidences of the presence of the Indians in the neighborhood of their settlements, WETZEL and WORLEY undertook to ascertain their whereabouts. They followed their tracks for several miles, and became so intent upon their prey, as to scarcely become aware of the distance they had wandered from the settlements, until they had gone eleven or twelve miles south, and nearly opposite to the point where the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad now strikes the Ohio River. Here they came upon a camp of Indians, who discovered the hunters about the same time they were themselves discovered. Both parties took to the trees, after the custom of Indian fighting, but the Indians greatly outnumbered the whites. Six or seven stalwart and trained Indian warriors of the Huron tribe were now pitted against two determined hunters; and, as it to add to the danger of their position, WETZEL was recognized by the Indians as their implacable enemy. They began a desperate running fight—a life-and-death contest. No reinforcements could reach the hunters until they had traveled at least ten miles, and long before that their wily foes would overpower them in all probability. Yet they determined to sell their lives dearly. WETZEL took command, and WORLEY obeyed him implicitly.

A tall Huron warrior was the first to fall. He rushed out from his covert with a yell, thinking that they were unprepared for a sudden attack, or would readily yield to the force of superior numbers. But in this he was mistaken, and his life paid the penalty. For a moment or so afterward the other Indians were silent, apparently awe-struck, but in that interval WETZEL had again loaded his gun. Several shots were fired at him, but he was securely shielded by a tree. And so from tree to tree for four exciting miles the hunters dodged and crept. Another warrior, in seeking stealthily to cut off their retreat, was killed, and the others became more cautious. Once WETZEL put his cap on the ramrod, as though peering round the tree, and when the Indian shot a bullet through it, he let it drop to the ground. The Indians rushed out, and two others fell. The movements were now carried on, on both sides, with the utmost caution. The hunters worked their way gradually toward the fort, the three remaining Indians becoming every moment more anxious. One of their number, perhaps while carefully climbing a tree on the opposite side from that of the hunters, with a view of starting them from their lurking-place, unconsciously exposed himself, and was wounded by one of the hunters; whereupon the other Indians, having trusted so long to the superiority of their numbers, and having a peculiar awe of WETZEL, stole away into the depths of the woods, leaving the hunters to return at their leisure to recount what was even then esteemed a marvelously heroic feat. The circumstance was related to your correspondent years ago, when JOSEPH WORLEY was even then called an old man.

For many years after civilization had claimed and metamorphosed these western wilds, the WORLEY brothers lived not far from Bellaire, on the Ohio River. A numerous progeny grew up around them, and their interest never abated in the march of progress and in the surrounding improvements. Until a few weeks previous to his death, the interest in current events continued very lively, and his memory and strength were remarkable. His death took place at the house of WILLIAM H. ROBINSON, with whom he had lived several years.

The Potato Bugs in the West.

From the Detroit Post, May 30.

The potato bugs, from the ravages of which the western part of the State suffered so much last year, have made their appearance in this vicinity in overwhelming numbers. They come into our gardens, and even into our houses, and swarm upon the sidewalks to be crushed by the feet of pedestrians. A gentleman from Grosse Point reports that they seem to be quite as much at home on the water as upon land, and that the surface of the lake is literally alive with them, as it often is with the June flies, which so swarm about our street lamps on warm Summer evenings. He says the potato bugs often fly a considerable distance, and that they float easily on the surface of the water. They are evidently bound to make a raid on Canada, and it will prove more disastrous than any Fenian raid has ever been. The curious instinct which prompts them to travel eastward does not find itself thwarted by wide stretches of water, for they float across, and resume their journey on the other side. It would be interesting to know for what great purpose these bugs started out on their trip from the Rocky Mountains eastward, and why they have been so frightfully prolific on the way. It now seems probable that the potato crop in Michigan will prove an entire failure this year.

The Will of the Late Bishop Clark.

From the Cincinnati Chronicle, May 31.

Bishop CLARK's will was this morning admitted to probate. The testator desires the payment of his just debts, including what may be due his wife as her own separate estate, as early as may be consistent with the judicious management of his estate. To his wife he bequeathes the residence, No. 200 West Eighth-street, together with the furniture, library, &c., and $10,000; to his two sons, D. W. and J. R. CLARK, $10,000 each; to his daughter, Mrs. FANNIE C. DAVIS, $9,000; to his daughter, M. AUGUSTA CLARK, $10,000; to his daughter, Mrs. KATIE S. MULLKIN, $9,000. His married daughters had each received $1,000. The balance of his estate his executors are directed to divide into four equal parts, one of which shall be given to the Methodist Episcopal Missionary Society; the second to the same society for the Mission House in New-York City; the third to the Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church for the support of a normal school (Clark University) of said society, located at or near Atlanta, Ga.; and the fourth to his wife. His wife and his sons-in-law, Dr. WILLIAM R. DAVIS and E. W. MULLKIN, were named as executors. The will was made on the 30th of December, 1870, and was signed in the presence of L. H. SWORMSTEDT, LUKE HITCHCOCK and W. M. PHILLIPS.

The Family of Lewis Cass.

From the Cincinnati Chronicle, May 31.

The mother of Gen. LEWIS CASS was a BELDEN, from the State of Vermont. One of her family, a cousin or second cousin, moved to Ohio about the beginning of this century. A brother of the distinguished statesman, LEWIS CASS, and the only one remaining of the old stock, now lives at Dresden, Ohio, at the advanced age of eighty-five years. He still retains his intellectual faculties to a pre-eminent degree for one of his years. He and his father before him were always Whigs, LEWIS CASS—contrary to what many have supposed—having been the only Democrat of the family in those days. GEORGE W. CASS, of Pittsburg, oldest son of the survivor at Dresden, is a well-known exception among those of the younger generation. The father of LEWIS CASS removed from New-Hampshire to Dresden, and located there an old military section of 4,000 acres on the rich bottom of the Muskingum, ("Blue," as the lads for claiming ownership to call it) and made of the former freedom of the family were reared. His surviving son has remained on the ancestral acres and closely watched with clear mind and fine judgment the movements and affairs of the world outside. He has few equals in conversation. Like a philosopher, he prepared for the decline of life, and with a full competency is enjoying his old age, quite literally, the dolce far niente.

Decoration Day in Delaware—A Letter from the President—Oration by Gen. Howard.

Decoration Day is always appropriately observed in Wilmington, Del., and unusual interest was added to the occasion this year by the unveiling of a beautiful shaft, just erected on Monument Hill, in memory of Delaware's patriot dead. In January, 1869, Secretary McCULLOCH presented the Association with marble for the column, and Congress, in July, 1870, gave brass cannon, from which was cast the eagle on top of the monument. The ground upon which it is erected was given by JOSHUA T. HEALY, Esq. At the unveiling, on Tuesday, an address was delivered by Gen. OLIVER O. HOWARD, in the course of which, alluding to some of our Generals, he said:

"Gen. W. T. SHERMAN had most remarkable suggestive ability. Grant has judicial power. He would pick out the best of SHERMAN's ten places. SHERIDAN's great quality was carefulness, but he had also pluck and vigor. These three men were equally wonderful in persistence—fighting a thing through. MEADE was conscientious and thorough; HANCOCK brilliant in executing; Gen. H. THOMAS, a true son of the South, was like WASHINGTON, with great steadiness and confidence, he would never leave a position; SEARNEY and LOGAN and MOWER had great dash; HOOKER was marked by completeness of preparation, but had too much confidence in himself; MCCLELLAN had extraordinary organizing power and great carefulness; SLOCUM had independence; SMITH, courage and generosity, inspiring confidence in all; BURNSIDE had true scriptural charity, self-sacrificing and forbearing; he stood where it was hard to stand, following a man of great reputation, whom it was hard to follow; the impulsive PORTER was the strongest one. On to Richmond. That brought us at last to victory and peace."

The following letter from President GRANT was read:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 24, 1871.

J. S. Valentine, H. DuPont, S. M. Harrington:

GENTLEMEN: Your letter of the 20th instant, inviting me to be present on the occasion of the unveiling of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument by the Soldiers' and Sailors' Association of Delaware, on the 30th instant, is received. I regret that I cannot be present with you on that interesting and memorable occasion. The history of similar ceremonies in commemoration of the same patriotic services by our departed soldiers and sailors taking place here on that day. I do not feel that it would be proper for me to leave at such a time. The 30th of May is not spent as Decoration Day in this city, but is devoted to ceremony of that day over the graves of the departed who have found their last earthly resting-place at Arlington, Va.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant, U. S. GRANT.

Another "Ring" Journal on the Grand Wedding.

From the New-York Herald, June 1.

ROYALTY ECLIPSED BY THE TAMMANY DEMOCRACY.

Tammany Hall, in her Oriental splendors, throws British royalty completely in the shade, and "the Boss" is fast approaching the magnificence of the Great Mogul. The wedding presents displayed in a grand show-room the other evening, on the occasion of the marriage of the lovely Miss "the Boss"—a princess of the New-York Democracy—to a worthy and accomplished gentleman from New-Orleans of the name of MAGINNIS—descended, probably, from some one of the ancient Kings of Ireland—were glorious to behold. They represented in cash the sum of $100,000 worth of wedding presents; unsurpassed by the collection of any royal house on wedding, or of any occasion of the kind, we dare say, since the marriage, some two or three years ago, of a daughter of the Khedive of Egypt, and completely eclipsing the jewelry presents to the British Princess LOUISE on the occasion of her marriage with the heir of the great Scottish Duke of ARGYLL. Seven hundred thousand dollars! What a testimonial of the loyalty, the royalty and the abounding East Indian resources of Tammany Hall! Was there ever any Democracy to compare with this Democracy, in glory, power and equal rights, under the sun? Never. And is it just the beginning of the good time coming. Don't talk of JEFF. DAVIS and his absurd democracy; don't mention the outrageous democracy of the Paris Commune, as representing true Democratic principles, but come to the fountain-head of Democracy, the old Wigwam, and you will get them, if you get within the lucky circle of the magic "ring." Then you get into a Democratic placer which gives you, without the labor of digging, but with some deep diving, the pearls of Peru, the silver ingots of Mexico, the gold of California and the diamonds of Golconda, South America and Alaska. And they say that by the rule of three it all comes out of the Tax levy, and from the abounding blessings of municipal sovereignty, and a municipal and a munificent emperor, who needs only a crown of brilliants and a Koh-i-noor to complete his glory, with the peacock, as large as life, with an outspread tail blazing all over with diamonds, to rise to the Oriental splendors of the Great Mogul.

The Verdict in the Milligan Case.

From the Indianapolis Journal, May 31.

After being out all Monday night, the jury in the Milligan case came into Court about 11 o'clock yesterday morning, and announced that they had agreed upon the verdict, which was handed to the clerk. He read as follows:

We, the jury, find the defendants guilty, and assess the damages of the complainant at $1.

JOSEPH TARRINGTON, Foreman.

The verdict created no especial excitement, as it was expected the damage, if any, would be only nominal. As to whether this carries the costs of the suit, amounting in the aggregate to $1,000 or $1,200, it has been finally settled that it does. The suit was originally in the State Courts, where, on an action for trespass, any verdict for the plaintiff carries the costs. The case was transferred to the United States Circuit Court, but that does not affect it in this regard. The same rule applies. If, on the other hand, the case had originated in the United States Courts, it would have required a verdict of $500 damages to carry the cost.

The jury had some difficulty in agreeing upon the sum named in the verdict. It is stated that one of them was in favor of allowing MILLIGAN $25,000 damage. Thereupon another juryman put the case in this light: If MILLIGAN had been in the same circumstances as the defendants at the time the trespass complained of was committed, would we have found the plaintiff guilty as did they? The jury were unanimous in the opinion that they would so have found him guilty. This kind of weakened the $25,000 man's ardor, and he kept coming down until he touched bottom at $1, when the other eleven were satisfied, and the verdict was given.

Third Assembly District Grant Club.

At a meeting of the Grant Club of the Third Assembly District last evening at their head-quarters, the Union Assembly Rooms, Wm. GRASSE, President, in the chair, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, A circular purporting to be signed by a committee representing a so-called Administration Club in the Fourteenth Ward, has been issued by a resident of this district holding positions under the Federal Government to unite in controlling the reorganization and re-enrollment of the Republican Party in the Assembly District, has been forwarded to several members of this Association; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we deprecate any ill-judged attempt on the part of extra officious office-holders to compromise the friends of the Administration by intrigue or attempting to intimidate the Republicans of this district into the belief that the coming reorganization is to be other than a full and fair expression of the Republicans of this district, without coercion or intimidation of any character whatever from parties in official position.

Reception of the Pittsburg Knights Templar.

The officers of the Grand Commandary of Knights Templar of the State of New-York assembled at Odd-fellows Hall, yesterday afternoon, to give a fitting reception to about 150 Knights from Pittsburg and Philadelphia, who arrived by the Philadelphia train, escorting some fifty Knights from the western section of Pennsylvania, who start for Europe in the Oceanic, at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The officers were accompanied by Dodworth's Band.

Dispatches from several of the Commanderies in the City, to the number of about 350, followed in the procession and marched through Grand-street to Broadway, and thence to the Cortlandt-street Ferry, where they awaited the arrival of the visiting Knights.

On arriving at Jersey City the visitors were entertained with a collation by a company of Knights of that locality, and then crossed to this City, when they were received by the escort of the Grand Encampment, and paraded up to Broadway, through that thoroughfare to Fourteenth-street, and thence through Fourteenth-street, Bowery and Spring-street to the St. Nicholas Hotel, where they were quartered for the night.

At 11 o'clock this morning Morton Commandery, of this City, will receive the visitors, and, accompanied by the Ninth Regiment Band, will escort them through Broadway, Fourteenth-street, Fifth-avenue and Twenty-third-street, to the ferry, which they will cross to the dock of the steam-ship Oceanic by a special boat. Then the excursionists will take leave of their escort, which will return by the same route, stopping at Maillard's for a collation. Thus over, the Pennsylvania visitors, who escorted the departing Knights, will be escorted to the Cortlandt-street Ferry, where they will take the train for home.

The Knights comprising the European excursionists are as follows:

Sir Knight William Hamilton, Eminent Commander; Sir Knight William H. Black, Generalissimo; Sir Knight Edwin M. Jenkins, Captain General; Sir Knight Rev. J. J. McIlvaye, Prelate; Sir Knight Michael Riley, Treasurer; Sir Knight James A. Sholes, Recorder; Sir Knight David A. Dock, Senior Warden; Sir Knight Amos Godfrey, Junior Warden; Sir Knight Thomas J. Cooper, Standard Bearer; Sir Knight Homer Langhlin, Sword Bearer; Sir Knight Henry Church, Warden; Sir Will A. Short, Marshal; Sir Knight Rev. W. V. Tudor, Sir Knight Rev. S. R. Gardner, Chaplains; Sir Knight Thos. Palmer, Sir Knight A. M. Ehmbo, Past Commanders, Members—S. F. F. Morrell, J. B. Haner, W. H. Thompson, J. J. Fisher, Edward Coates, J. M. Cumming, Joseph G. Graham, H. D. Reymer, John Heath, J. L. A. Comb, M. D., J. K. Butler, Wm. H. Demore, Chas. H. Shephard, J. G. Bowen, J. C. Hutchins, E. H. Taylor, C. L. P. Boice, O. Gray, W. S. McKee, J. W. C. HONEST REPUBLICANS.

Another Address in Favor of the Reorganization of the Party in New-York.

The following address to the earnest, thoughtful Republicans of the Seventeenth Assembly District, in favor of a pure party organization, and opposed to affiliation with Tammany Hall, has been prepared by Mr. D. B. MERLIN, with the approval of Col. JOEL W. MASON, Messrs. JOHN E. RUSSELL, CHARLES A. FLAMMA

Before Judge Cardozo.

A SUSPICIOUS MARRIAGE CERTIFICATE.

Caroline Scott vs. William Honeywell et al.—This case, already noticed in the TIMES, came up on a confirmation of the motion for the appointment of a receiver on behalf of plaintiff. It is claimed, on the part of the plaintiff, that James Scott was married, in 1861, to her, then Caroline Bagley, and that he had two or three children by her. They did not, however, live together for a number of years prior to his death, which occurred in 1868. In 1864, the deceased, it is alleged, married another lady and lived with her as his wife at the time of his death. He made a will, giving his estate, amounting to nearly $100,000, to the second wife and her mother. About three or four months after his decease, she duly qualified, and in 1866 also died, leaving the property in the hands of Honeywell and others, defendants, as trustees. There have been about 200 affidavits read in the case, bearing on the subject of the alleged marriage. About three weeks ago, after the bulk of the affidavits had been read, counsel for the plaintiff produced a paper, purporting to be a marriage certificate, stating the ceremony to have been performed by Rev. D. V. McLean, at the City of New-York, Pastor of the Presbyterian Church at New-York (Gerrobe Street), dated, also, that she married James Scott, at Newark, in 1861, at his residence in Bleecker-street, New-York City, between Broadway and the Bowery. On the part of Honeywell and others, it is claimed that the certificate is a forgery; and they produced affidavits to show, first, that Scott never lived in the City of New-York; and, second, that, for the period of the time the plaintiff alleges the certificate was given and the marriage took place, he was living in Lebanon, Ohio. They also produced affidavits of his brother, and of most of the leading citizens of Freehold, N. J., where he (Dr. McLean) has been living from 1852 to 1868, to show that the signature to the certificate is a forgery. The witnesses, on the part of the plaintiff, stated that McLean was an educated man, and in 1852 assumed the Presidency of a college in Easton, Pa., where he lived for about two years; and, in addition to his ordinary duties, he was in the habit of being the officiating clergyman. He was, in fact, a man of an illiterate class. The signature to the certificate was spelled "Fitz-Gerald," in one place, where he marks of being the production of a person unaccustomed to business.

On the part of the plaintiff some affidavits were offered from persons who said they believed the signature to be that of the reverend gentleman. The fact is also sworn to by the daughter of the deceased, Dr. McLean, and also that of his brother, were to the effect that during the year 1861, he was in Lebanon, Ohio, and was not in New-York during that year. There were also several affidavits from persons who were citizens of Lebanon, Ohio, to the effect that, if such a marriage had taken place, it would have been known to them, and various other circumstances which tended to show that the day after the ceremony in question was alleged to have been performed in New-York. The Court took the papers and reserved decision.

For the plaintiff, Willis and Sabine Andrews for plaintiff; J. J. Vanderpool and J. Sterling Smith for defendant.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM—JUNE 2.

Before Judge McCunn.

THE TROUBLES OF LANDLORD AND TENANT.

Edward G. Smith vs. Franich D. Fox.—Plaintiff is the tenant of defendant in Thompson-street, and defendant obtained a warrant in the First District Court to dispossess him for nonpayment of rent. When the constable presented his warrant, the plaintiff handed him the amount of the rent with costs, which the officer tendered to defendant, who refused to receive it. Subsequently under instructions of the deputy clerk of the Court, that the acceptance of the money would not operate as a waiver of the effectiveness of the warrant, defendant assented that the money be accepted by the officer, with the understanding that at the 1st of June the plaintiff would vacate the premises. Plaintiff now refuses to vacate, claiming that the payment of the rent and costs to the Clerk of the Court operated to vacate the warrant. He therefore sues for injunctive restraining the defendants from enforcing the warrant. Judge McCunn, two days ago, granted a temporary injunction and an order to show cause, and today heard arguments on the motion to make the injunction permanent. The following letter from plaintiff to defendant, given verbatim et literatim, sets forth his view of the rights and wrong of the matter: "New-York, May 24, 1871. H. D. Fox, Esq.: Sir: I have placed the rent in the Marshal's hands, to pay you with your costs; the money is returned to me again, and I will pay you any moment that you wish to accept and return to you, your house or premises, on the first of June 1871 as a man. But you seem to carried out your revenge, and refuses to accept your rent, and only to have power to draw my four children and my wife in to the street; this seems to be your pleasure and fun take things cool and think over, I warn you; not do carry out your malicious design, when you know that you are in the wrong, there is your money, and if you carry your hard, had your orders been carried out yesterday, God knew the consequence of it. I do not make no threats against any one. But all I have to say is, that you shall not put my family in the street. By law you are entitled to your premises, or your rent which is not refused by law. I am prepared, and did place the money in the hands of the Marshal, and you refused to accept it, therefore I hold you what is justice to accept your rent, and at the end of the month I will deliver up the premises to you with the cotton fixtures that I have put in; leave them in the condition as they are now. You have also injured my wife by put a new tube in or fix the one that is in in the house so that I would make use of it and put it in would condition. You have never done it. You have been in the house with the plumber 2 or 3 times; take a price, or the Croton water pipe is the yard do you do it. No; you have neglected now twice. I enclose my letter here and hope that you will consider over it. But all I warn you as not to draw my family out or my furniture. I admit that if you could not get your rent, then it would be put Justice that you should claim your house as at once. Yours, &c., J. G. SMITH."

The Judge continued the temporary injunction, reserving his decision as to the reason to make it permanent.

CITY COURT OF BROOKLYN.

IMPORTANT DECISION BY JUDGE NELSON—CONTEST BETWEEN RELIGIOUS BODIES.

The Congregation Beth Elohim vs. The Central Presbyterian Church.—The facts in this case are substantially as follows: Plaintiffs were to have paid the defendants $25,000 for a church edifice, purchased on contract, and they did pay them $4,000 on account; finding, however, that the contract was not binding and valid, the plaintiffs bring action to recover the $4,000 paid. The defendants, on the other hand, deny the allegations of plaintiff, and set up counter claim, asking judgment for the $21,000 remaining unpaid. On these facts, the following important decision was rendered by Judge Nelson yesterday. He holds:

I. That the contract of purchase, recognized and acted upon by both parties, and upon which the $4,000 sought to be reclaimed, was paid, as portion of the purchase money, was valid.

II. That the neglect to use the corporate seal in the execution of a mere contract of purchase and sale, a contract requiring no seal, whatever, is no gravamen of objection to the validity of the instrument as a corporate act. When those presumptions of authority and assent which arise from the use of a corporate seal need not be resorted to, or clearly arise from other circumstances, such as the contract in question, for the time or occasion, adopt a private seal, or may contract in writing without a seal. (3 Wend. R., 160; 1 Harris & Gill R., 238; 10 Cushing R., 27.) The authorities to this effect are collected and their agreement has been conclusively shown.

III. That the order granted at a Special Term of the Supreme Court, upon the petition of the trustees of the Independent, setting forth the contract in question, was sufficient under the statute. The condition that such order should be obtained might well have been waived in the agreement, but when not expressed such condition is implied.

IV. That petition and order were submitted to the plaintiff's counsel and agent before the time fixed for closing the purchase, and the objection now made that the petition and order had not been filed is but formal. In theory it is the duty of the clerk to enter orders. (9 Barb., 24.)

V. That the rule in the plaintiff's present security, both the money at paid. These conclusions are adopted after a careful consideration of the learned and able argument of the plaintiffs' counsel, and in view of the facts and law.

VI. That the defendant's claim for judgment against the plaintiff for $21,000, the residue of the purchase price, must be overruled. (1.) In such case, and upon the general rule, the vendor is not entitled to recover of the purchaser in default, the [illegible] No such doctrine has been shown therein. There has, it is true, been a loss of the property, and the money unpaid, but it cannot be assumed that the use of the property, or before the purchase have received in its place, has not been equivalent to that loss of interest. (2.) Upon the facts, it would be inequitable to enforce the payment of the $21,000 and compel the plaintiffs to [illegible] (3.) Mr. Justice Gridley, of the Supreme Court, in a case coming up on a similar demurrer, unanimously accepted the decisive principle upon which, in the present instance, we have [illegible] (Wend. R., 20; 11 id., 9; 8 id., 8; 1 id., 8) in which [illegible] as to the time, the order of the day, the [illegible] the impossibility of compelling a specific performance, and, finally, of the [illegible] Mr. Justice Gridley, upon the [illegible] Nor can comes upon the ground of [illegible] it would be [illegible] proper conveyance, and [illegible] the action against the defendant [illegible] a cause of action [illegible] whether [illegible] recover any money, more or [illegible] the demurrer. (4.) [illegible] Justice Gridley [illegible] raising the rule as to [illegible] parchaser's habit [illegible] conflicting opinion [illegible] by writers, but Mr. Fox [illegible] the English cases, that the land has become [illegible] (2 Para., Con. 231.) It may be that, if [illegible] defendant had been unadvisable, [illegible] which should have been [illegible] would go to enhance the damages. The method is one of mere indemnity; the inquiry, How much [illegible] the seller suffered by the [illegible] the purchaser? In Laird vs. Pim (7 M. and W., 274,) Park B. says that the [illegible] Cases in enforce specific performance are not subject to that objection. As a general rule, it would be unwise to allow the seller holding such a money contract, and also holding the title to and possession of the land, to receive the whole price, at if the title left with him, he could pass by operation of law. Nothing is gained by attempting to assimilate such case with cases arising on contracts for the sale of personal property, where the recovery of the price, [illegible] the vendee, by [illegible] passes the title. That is, in the [illegible] between the [illegible] are widely separate and apart, governed by different rules and principles. (5.) Upon the evidence, we have defendants holding that in such case the price of the land can be recovered; in other States, equally distinctly holding the opposite. With as it is, we lay out of view the case of Richards vs. Bolton (Paige), and perhaps a few of the decisions in Court of New-York, [illegible] (7 Mr. Bedgwick in his work on damages (p. 205, 2d ed.) [illegible] the rule [illegible] but remains open for consideration. I feel quite at liberty, under the circumstances, to determine the question according to my own convictions. It may be said, and the defendants, by tendering his conveyance, have discharged the agreement on their part. But [illegible] would be unjust to protect themselves from liabilities which might subsequently be found against, and to lay a foundation for a claim for damages should the land, and in view of plaintiffs' defaults might have sold it to other parties. The defendants acted here in good faith, and involved questions in respect to which counsel might well differ. No costs are imposed upon either party as in favor of the other.

Police Trials.

Thirty-seven pickpockets were arraigned yesterday before Commissioner MANNING for various offenses. Most of the complaints were for the usual disorderlies of duty. One of the more serious charges was that against Patrolman JAMES K. BISHOP, Twenty-ninth Precinct, of being so much under the influence of liquor as to be unfit for duty. He was in Stanton-st. HE attempted to explain that having chills and fever he had taken black pepper in a stimulant. His case was referred to the Board.

Patrolmen LINDEN and REYNOLDS, Twenty-second Precinct, were charged with fighting in the station-house, and the charges were not only clearly proved, but admitted as each officer discovered the other was there. The difficulty had its origin in the fact that Capt. KILLILEA had reported to the accused a tale taken to him by REYNOLDS that LINDEN had returned to the Station-house without being relieved. The case was referred to the Board.

*Exclusive of accrued interest.

The slight advance in Gold yesterday is now attributed to a recently-formed combination of Brokers to put the price up by bold purchases in the Gold Room, not only for cash, but on contracts with short sellers who are not believers in higher Gold or in a scarce supply of Exchange. Of course, the movement must turn on the last-named point. At present, the export demand for Gold reflects no urgent scarcity of Bills on London, although the settlements for account of the Importers through the Summer months are admitted to be large. On the other hand, the negotiations in England and on the Continent of American Bonds of various descriptions, to be almost immediately drawn against, so far quality the Summer deficiency of ordinary Exports as against the settlements referred to. Aside from the question of Exchange, Gold has no intrinsic strength. The political situation on both sides the Atlantic and the strong hold which American Stocks have upon the English and Continental markets, as well as the indifference of our own people to Gold as compared with Greenbacks, are all against the rise. True, as a speculation, directed by strong brokers, Gold may be advanced at any time by main force, especially with cheap money, but after this comes the query, who is to take the load off their shoulders when settlement day comes round?

The advance in Gold to 112¾@112⅞ ₱ cent. has put up the Public Funds, as a result, issues to Europe, and developed, at the same moment, an unusual scarcity of Stock. This, however, ought not to be a matter of surprise, as the holders of United States 5-20s on this side see no immediate opportunity of employing their Money if they should sell out. The 1867s are 114¼@114⅝, and the 5 ₱ cent. 10-40s 110@110¼ ₱ cent., and other coupon issues of 6 ₱ cents., dealt in abroad, firm in the same proportion.

The Railway market is looking better this Afternoon than for several days past, notwithstanding a light business at the Boards. Rock Island and Lake Shore lead the Western speculation. The friends of the latter show renewed confidence after the few days of weakness in the movement, and their example has encouraged the buyers of Northwests and some of the other Western Roads, and the general market has altogether a more decidedly Bullish look than for a week past. The following quotations were made after the late Boards on Broad Street as compared with Thursday night. The Foreign Exchanges leave off quiet at 110½@110⅞ ₱ cent. for 60 days London. Money 3 to 5 ₱ cent. on Call loan. Some of the Miscellaneous Stocks, as Consolidated Coal, were in demand. The Express and Telegraph Stocks not so firm. The Southern State Bonds are ¼@1 ₱ cent. better than yesterday on Tennessee.

The Philadelphia Evening Telegraph reports as follows of the result of the offer made by Mr. JAY COOKE to the Treasury, on behalf of his own house and the other Bankers, acting in New-York and London as Subscription Agents for the New Loan:

"The Secretary of the Treasury has finally notified Messrs. JAY COOKE & Co. that the proposition, made in behalf of a combination of banks and bankers and themselves, to take the balance of the two hundred million loan is declined, for the reason that the Secretary doubts his power to accept some of the conditions proposed.

The Secretary, at the conclusion of his letter to JAY COOKE, pays that gentleman the following merited compliment:

"But, believe me, I am under great obligations to you and your house for the active efforts already made by you in aiding the Government to place the loan."

It is probable that a proposition which the Secretary may feel it best to accept may be shortly tendered to him by the same party."

Large and Small Capitalists.

The Nation had some excellent remarks, in a recent number, on the superior advantage to the community of "miserly capitalists" over generous spendthrifts. It reaffirms, what the science of political economy everywhere teaches, that the capitalist is employing more labor, and increasing the productive power of the community more by his selfish investments, than the extravagant liver and the generous bon vivant, who pours out his money on things which perish in the using. An "ASTOR and a VANDERBILT," says the Nation, receive for salaries only their family expenses, and for this moderate sum, form and increase the resources of the country. As a comparison between the selfish capitalist and selfish spendthrift, there can be no doubt of the public advantage of the former. When we come, however, to a comparison between Mr. VANDERBILT, with fifty millions of property, and a hundred thousand small capitalists, with five hundred each, the benefit to the community is vastly greater from the latter. Perhaps, as a mere matter of economy, Mr. VANDERBILT can better increase his fifty millions, and thus employ more labor, than can the hundred thousand individuals. He has a better investing faculty—more of their earnings will be wasted than his. He will advance the railroads of the country better. His brain will add more to the wealth of the nation than theirs. But the great object of civilization is not alone the accumulation of wealth. It is the education and improvement of each individual. Each one of the small capitalists is better for having his own little property to manage, even if he loses a portion of it. He might receive as much, working for Mr. VANDERBILT, and lose nothing; but he would not be worth as much to the country, either mentally or morally.

The most intelligent and powerful class in this country, who saved it in civil war, and will always be the most valuable element in the population, are the small, independent proprietors. They are the true wealth of the nation. The large capitalists are too powerful. They control legislation, tyrannize over the public, and help to corrupt the general conscience. They are the modern feudal Barons, and, if of such character as FISK, can prey on the community and almost bid defiance to law and morality. When, in addition, they control the means and income of a large city, as they do here, they may lead a career of brilliant and successful crime and corruption, such as will debauch the minds of the young and ignorant. "Can this immense accumulation of wealth in the hands of individuals be checked?" is the great question of the day. Moralists ask it in view of the growing and fearful corruption of public men and public bodies. Social reformers ask it in view of the hard lot of the great masses of all countries. The laborers everywhere, in their blind way, are seeking to answer and solve it. The better distribution of wealth—this is the ardent desire of the best minds in every civilized community. There is no question that the world would be happier if in all countries the people could be more in the condition of our agricultural class; independent, with reasonable wants supplied, but with few great fortunes. Without the Astors, and Vanderbilts, and Stewarts, the nation would be doubtless poorer in material, but richer in moral, wealth. We believe that one great force, acting in all countries, and threatening the very structure of society in some, is now steadily promoting a better distribution of wealth. We mean the combinations of the working classes—whether in the form of trades-unions, strikes, associations, ten-hour laws, or co-operations and industrial partnerships. In one and all of these the main and leading object is to secure for labor a larger share of the profits of production. In place of the capitalist obtaining his twenty per cent. profit in manufacture or the creation of wealth, the workman hopes to make it ten or fifteen per cent., and to take the balance himself. To a certain degree the laborers have already succeeded in this, especially in this country, where they have political power to aid them.

We doubt if, in many branches of manufacture, fortunes could now so easily be made by employers as formerly, owing to the high price of labor. Accumulation of wealth in agriculture is slow, for a similar reason. Commerce offers but tardy increase of fortunes, because wages and salaries are so high. In fact, in this latter branch, labor and bad legislation have driven capital almost out of the field. Everywhere we hear of slow profits, because so much must be paid in wages; in other words, wealth is being more distributed, and immense fortunes increase more slowly. Labor is better paid now in the United States than anywhere in the world; and fortunes must be equalizing. Of course, speculative brains, with skill, at times make the lucky strokes; and the "inventive talent" will give certain individuals immense advantages. But everything tends in this country to break up these vast fortunes, and death nearly always scatters them. We look continually for a greater equalization of properties in all countries, through the influence of the laboring classes.

Horace Greeley and the Tammany Republicans.

It is half amusing to see the eagerness with which the Tousey-Manierre Tammany Republicans constantly thrust the name of HORACE GREELEY into the faces of the public. Under cover of that, they think to conceal their own trickery. They seem determined to make good the popular opinion, that though Mr. GREELEY may be honest himself, he is constantly surrounded by the most dishonest factions in political life. Here is an anecdote to the point from the Springfield Republican:

"Some one said to him once, 'How is it, GREELEY, that, while you are honesty itself, your personal friends seem to be the greatest political thieves and rascals, office-seekers, and legislative robbers in the community?' 'W-e-l,' drawled out the philosopher slowly, 'I don't know, myself, but it does look a good deal so, that is true.'"

It certainly is "true" as regards the Tammany Republicans. These men, with their hands full of Tammany money, pretend to be faithful to the Republican Party, and hope to impose afresh upon the public by using the name of HORACE GREELEY as a stalking-horse. They have taken advantage of his absence in the South to publish a manifesto in which his name occurs as frequently as the word "Selah" in the Psalms. In fact, it is all "Selah." "The regular organization, with HORACE GREELEY at its head"—and so they go on, trying to make out that HORACE GREELEY is responsible for all that they have done or intend to do.

Now these impostors carefully conceal the fact that Mr. GREELEY proposed a resolution at one of their meetings agreeing to the reorganization proposed by the State Committee—and that they voted it down by a large majority. When that incident occurred, many people wondered why Mr. GREELEY allowed his name to be dragged into the mire any longer by these Tammany Republicans. Obviously he could get no honor from association with them. It was equally plain that he could be of no use in the Committee, for its members rejected his proposition by an almost contemptuous vote. He wished to assent to reorganization—the Manierres, Touseys, and Hank Smiths voted him down. It is easy enough to see why these double-faced gentlemen should desire to have HORACE GREELEY at their head—but why Mr. GREELEY should consent to be so used is not so plain. As a missionary he is a failure in the Committee. The members will go on pocketing the Tammany bribes in spite of him. And now they have the impudence to use his name in his absence in a manner which we will venture to hope is totally unauthorized, and which certainly cannot assist Mr. GREELEY in his new enterprise as candidate for the Presidency. The people will never choose a man for that post, however "honest" he may be, who consents to be made the tool of a corrupt and treacherous faction.

Jeff. Davis and the Democracy.

The Ex-President of the Confederacy is getting to be a veritable Old Man of the Mountain to the Democratic Party. The frantic efforts they are now making to shake him off are laughable, when one remembers how they have been wont to sympathize with him, apologize for him, and give him aid and comfort in times past. It would not be strange if the Democracy should be found, ere long, clamoring for his life as loudly as they formerly pleaded to save him from the gallows. The World, which used to be his best friend and firmest supporter, is especially venomous in its present treatment of the rebel chief. It has taken to calling him names, and actually surpasses, in its contemptuous epithets, the vituperation which, during the rebellion, it poured out upon the head of President LINCOLN. In a single article in yesterday's World, we find the once renowned, patriotic, virtuous, and brilliant JEFF. stigmatized as "broken old JEFF. DAVIS," "an utter political wreck," a "bankrupt politician," a "false prophet" indulging in his "dotage folly," &c. "A cause must be desperate indeed," says the World, "that can find no better advocate than JEFF. DAVIS." JEFF. might reply with equal truth that "a cause must be desperate indeed that can find no better advocate than the World." Of the two, we think JEFF. DAVIS is the ablest as he certainly is the most honest and consistent advocate. He does not change his principles with every change of the moon. He does not call men "swindlers," "thieves," and "highway robbers" one day, and pure and honest officials the next. This may be owing to his never having edited a corporation paper.

JEFF. is a wicked criminal we admit, and ought to be hanged, but he is no more wicked than he was eight or ten years ago, when the World and the Democratic Party were giving him all the aid and encouragement they dared to give. Indeed, we cannot see wherein JEFF. DAVIS differs from the Democratic Party as they stood even one year ago. He still believes in the "lost cause," and, if there was any meaning in their words, so did they. He is for keeping open the issues which Republicans claim were settled by the war; so were they.

The World talks about the "complete unanimity of the Democratic Party in discarding bygone issues," and says "the New-York Democracy defined their position long ago." How long, pray? It is barely a year since the Democratic Party of New-York met in convention, at Rochester, to nominate Judges of the Court of Appeals. There was no particular necessity for introducing party politics, and especially national politics, into such a convention, but the Democracy did introduce them nevertheless. They were so full of the subject that they could not keep it out, and what did they say? The burden of the speeches was precisely in accordance with the position occupied by JEFF. DAVIS today. The constitutional amendments were to be resisted at all hazards, and the State Judiciary was to be made a party to the new revolution. One of the chief speakers in that Convention, and the man who acted as spokesman of the Tammany delegation, was RICHARD O'GORMAN—the "silver-tongued O'GORMAN," as the Democracy delight to call him. In advocating the nomination of SANFORD E. CHURCH for Chief-Justice, Mr. O'GORMAN said that "the Democratic Party required a politician for Chief-Justice of the Court of Appeals quite as much as a lawyer. The usurpations of Congress and the so-called amendments to the Constitution which that body had imposed on the country, required a man at the head of the Judiciary of this State who would stand firm. We had gone through, and might still go through, revolutionary times." There was only one Democrat in the Convention (Mr. RUGER, of Onondaga,) who had the courage to rebuke these utterances; the majority applauded them, and Mr. CHURCH was nominated against Judge COMSTOCK, who was the candidate of those who, like Mr. RUGER, argued that "the State of New-York needed a great lawyer and not a great politician for Chief-Judge." Who believes that the Democratic Party of this State really hold any different principles now from what they did a year ago? And why should they attempt to hiss down JEFF. DAVIS now for uttering sentiments which they applauded then? They ought rather to reward him for his fidelity, and to adopt as a candidate the man whom, for ten years, they have followed as a guide.

Repudiation Revived.

There is a striking likeness between the resolutions of the notorious Democratic Convention of 1868, in reference to the national obligations, and those of the Ohio Convention of June 1. The latter are hailed with applause by the Democratic papers which are anxious to take a "new departure" from the corpses of past issues. The former were rejected with instant scorn by the people, and were reviled by the very papers that now accept from the Ohio Convention their almost exact copy. The resolutions of 1868 said that "where the obligations of the Government do not expressly state upon their face, or the law under which they were issued does not provide, that they shall be paid in coin, they ought in right and in justice to be paid in the lawful money of the United States;" and demanded one currency for the Government and the people—the producer and the bondholder. These expressions were received with detestation, not unmingled with dismay, throughout the country. Beneath their bombastic antitheses and sounding proclamation of justice, honest people saw a subtle and determined purpose to engraft on the policy of a powerful party the theory of repudiation. The feeling against the financial policy of the party was so great, that the New-York World devoted a large share of its precious time in explaining away everything positive in it, while Gov. SEYMOUR lavished all the ingenuities of his sophistry to make it appear its exact opposite. But the people took the plain advice of Mr. PENDLETON, and "repudiated the repudiators."

Untaught by this lesson, the Democratic Convention of Ohio, with GEORGE H. PENDLETON—the representative repudiator of the lot, and according to the World the most popular man in Ohio, at its head—takes up the exact sense, and almost the exact language, of the resolutions of 1868. Its twelfth resolution declares: "That while we reject repudiation, we equally reject the proposition to pay the bondholders more than the contract with them demands;" "that the creditor is entitled to be paid in the same currency he loaned the Government; that where he loaned greenbacks he should be paid in greenbacks, unless the contract otherwise provides."

Here is Monsieur Tonson come again. The fight made in 1868 is, it seems, to be fought anew. The rights of those who accepted the faith of the Government, and in time of serious risk lent their money to the Government on terms which the Government itself fixed, are again assailed. The credit of the nation, which the fidelity and courage of the present Administration have so well advanced, is to be again threatened. The issue was very direct at the former period, and was boldly met. We had hoped it would not be revived. But since it has been, and the Democracy, from PENDLETON to the World, are ranging themselves on the side of the repudiators, we have great confidence that the people will put them down again, and even more decisively than when, three years since, they were divided against themselves.

Owners and Miners.

There is one side to such disasters as those of Avondale and Pittston which is generally overlooked by writers and juries. In the first moment of horror, we have nothing but sympathy for the unfortunate sufferers and their families, and nothing but censure and indignation for the "heartless" and "grasping" capitalists, whose selfish love of gain has prevented them from taking the necessary precautions to guard their workmen from the dangers of the mine. There is a deal of justice in this; but, while we are far from wishing to relieve the owners of any just burden of responsibility, it may be worth while to inquire whether they are alone to blame for such accidents.

The verdict of the Coroner's jury, which we published the other day, reflected very severely on the owners of the West Pittston mine for not having constructed a second shaft, in accordance with the law, to afford a supply of fresh air, and to provide means of escape in case of accident to the working shaft. The censure also includes the Government Inspector, whose duty it is to see that the law is complied with. Now, in this case, at least, the responsibility does not rest entirely upon the owners. They were ready, months ago, to go on with the construction of a second shaft, but the miners, who had struck, refused to allow the work to proceed. Not only was the mining of coal forbidden, but the prohibition was extended to works intended mainly for their own benefit, and which could be of use to the owners only in case labor was resumed in the mines. By this short-sighted policy, the unfortunate miners themselves brought about the very state of things for which the owners are censured. When work was resumed, the Inspector was placed in this dilemma,—he must either enforce the law against the miners who wished to go to work after so many months of self-imposed idleness, or let them go into the mine and run the same risks to which they had always been willing to expose themselves, and which certainly were not made greater by the recent law. The miners were miserably impoverished by the long strike. They were destitute of food, of clothing, of shoes, and all were eager to get to work again. They would have regarded it as a most tyrannical exercise of power had the Inspector, under such circumstances, refused to allow them to go into the mine. He was undoubtedly to blame for allowing the law to be violated, but his action was not wholly without excuse.

In this case the miners themselves invited a violation of the law, and it is well known that they habitually disregard the rules made for their safety by the owners. They are the most reckless of men. Familiarity with danger breeds such contempt that they seem to count rather than avoid it. They will strike a match to light a pipe, in a dangerous locality, where fire-damp is known to exist; or, if they haven't matches, will unlock their safety lamps, for the same purpose. A great prejudice exists among miners against these lamps. They shed but little light, owing to their peculiar construction; and to obtain more the miners will resort to any expedient. They have been known to chuckle with satisfaction when the flame expanded, so as to fill the wire-gauze tube that surrounds it, (the sure signal of the presence of fire-damp, which becomes explosive before it is offensive to the lungs,)—because the increased flame gave a corresponding increase of light!

The only way to put a stop to these and similar violations of rules for the government of mines, is for the laborers and owners to come to a mutual understanding that every violation, whether followed by serious consequences or not, shall be severely punished. This has been accomplished in some foreign mines, with excellent results. Why should it not be tried here? Our own miners are surely not less intelligent than those abroad, or less quick to see what is for their own advantage. This is one of the questions that might, with profit to both parties, be settled by an Umpire or a Board of Arbitration.

The Scrip Dividend Tax.

The recent decision of Commissioner PLEASONTON, directing the collection of the revenue tax upon the eighty per cent. scrip dividend of the New-York Central Railroad Company, will probably prove the forerunner of an equally important decision with regard to the scrip dividends of other corporations, as well as other scrip issues of this same company and its coparceners. For many months, the Department has had under consideration the liability to tax of numerous fire and marine insurance companies, whose habit it has been for years to divide scrip among their customers. It has not been their habit, however, to return any of these dividends as subject to tax, and thus a sum, which, in the aggregate, equals that of the Central Railroad assessment, is in a fair way to be charged up against these companies. It is computed that some twenty-five million dollars of scrip dividends have been made by the fire and marine insurance companies, since the Internal Revenue law went into operation, and the matter was some time ago reported by the Commissioner as in process of investigation.

Under the ruling of the Department, and, in fact, under the letter of the law without any such ruling, it is difficult to see how any action can be taken against the Railroad Company without a similar procedure as to the issuers of insurance scrip. Fish cannot be made of one and flesh of the other, while both are so nearly identical in character.

If the phraseology of the Internal Revenue law with reference to scrip issues is deemed sufficient, as surely it must be, to justify a demand for $1,151,800 upon the great railroad corporation, we cannot doubt the result to which the Commissioner will feel compelled to come when he reads the section pertaining to insurance dividends. At all events, now that his hand is in, we suggest he making thorough work of these unsettled questions, no matter whom they affect; for it certainly will be easier to collect upon them now than after the income tax and other tax laws have been repealed.

An Impressive Warning.

A terrible epidemic, of which we have given an account in our columns, has been raging at Buenos Ayres. The population of that city is about 190,000, and although tens of thousands have fled, seven hundred of the remainder were dying every day when the last mails left the place. Attention has been freely invited of late by the Press to the dismally instructive example of Paris. It has been pointed out that there are elements here in New-York which threaten, if unchecked, to produce misery and devastation equal to that endured in Buenos Ayres. The truth cannot be gainsaid, and the warning should be dwelt upon and enforced by all intelligent men.

The disease which is making such frightful ravages is yellow fever, and when the intelligence of the outbreak of the epidemic first arrived, there appeared to be some division of opinion respecting its cause. It has not, however, taken profound consideration to trace that cause out. Buenos Ayres is a city which for years has been without proper drainage. An insignificant stream receives nearly the whole refuse of the population, and people who have been there in hot weather know how insupportable, at such times, is the atmosphere. In the absence of a proper system of sewerage, or, to be exact, of any system at all, the liberal use of disinfectants, at least in the sultry season, was absolutely necessary. A few thousand dollars spent in carbolic acid and chloride of lime might have averted the scourge that is now desolating the city. Even this was not resorted to, and now we see the shocking consequences.

It is a circumstance worthy of note and remembrance, however, that at the last meeting of the Argentine Legislature a law was passed for the drainage and water supply of Buenos Ayres. An English civil engineer, Mr. BATEMAN, was intrusted by the Government with the construction of the works; and, the authorities, it is said, have given him carte blanche as regards scope and extent. No more signal case has occurred of shutting the stable door after the horse has escaped. The lesson ought not to be lost on the people of New-York. With unsurpassed natural advantages for drainage, with a water shed of a city, its base two miles of width flanked on either hand by a noble river, we go on year after year with nearly all our streets, except the central ones, in a state of deplorable filthiness, such as may, in any hot Summer, cost us a decimating plague. When Gen. MCCLELLAN's improvements are carried out, perhaps this will be remedied. But are we to wait until those splendid granite piers are built, and until the above avenues of two hundred and fifty feet wide relieve Broadway? Whoever will take the trouble to walk through the fringe of the lower part of the town, especially near Washington and Fulton Markets, and consider the effect of protracted hot weather, like that which we have lately experienced—and who will bear in mind the sad consequences of the neglect of hygienic precautions in Buenos Ayres—will see reason for wishing more immediate protection. There is no rational excuse for the shameful condition of those out-lying streets; and, much as we should deplore the penalty that may be inflicted upon us at any time during the fierce heats of Summer, none can say that it has not been fairly incurred.

MINOR TOPICS.

We have allowed the organs of Mr. TWEED to tell the story of the great event which recently happened in his family, and a very pretty story it is. The Herald rather proudly boasts that royalty has been eclipsed by the Boss, and that he has rivaled the splendors of the "Great Mogul." The accounts which we have published fully justify all this glorification. People who find it rather hard to provide their children with bread, will be interested to learn that Mr. TWEED, who was a bankrupt chair-maker a few years ago, can afford to spend a sum of money on a wedding sufficient to keep hundreds of poor families for a twelvemonth. He has caused his journals to relate that a member of his family was a "mass of precious gems," and that her very boots were covered with diamond buttons. Many of the dupes who keep him in power would be very glad if they could get boots, without diamonds, for their children. What pays as well as the "protection" of politicians? Farmers work hard—so do laborers in the City. But if you want to grow rich "beyond the dreams of avarice," you must get a city to plunder, and call yourself a "Boss." The moral of the story which we have quoted from Democratic papers will not be lost on the public—or even on the poorer class of Democrats. Some day they will ask why one man should be able to boast that his children are able to hang their boots with diamonds, while their own children go in rags.

Some of the Parisian journals in commenting upon the Bourbon address recently issued, say that "the voice of France" must decide who shall rule. It is astonishing how little we hear of that voice. There has been hubbub enough from Paris—but the rest of France is silent. Nobody thinks it worth while to telegraph an abstract of "provincial" opinion. Is NAPOLEON still popular in the rural districts? Do the agriculturists want the Republic or the Bourbons? We have no information on the subject. The habit of treating Paris as France still clings to the purveyors of news, and we know less of French opinion, properly so called, than of the occurrences which are happening on the borders of Persia.

Reorganization of the Republican Party in New-York meets with uniform and marked approval throughout the State. The Republicans outside the City have had a long experience of working by the side of traitors. Rolling up large majorities for Republican principles and sound government, they have seen them, on reaching New-York, turned to naught by the helplessness and treachery of professed Republicans here. They recognize the impossibility of reforming the party in the City by any voluntary movement originating from a portion of its members, and they justly place great reliance on the present efforts of the Committee of the State at large. If the Republicans of New-York cannot come together at the call of the State Convention, under conditions that make it possible to exclude at least the open agents of Tammany from their councils, then we shall afford evidence of the truth of a remark made by the Evening Post, that the Tammany usurpation is "as good a government as the people deserve or will bear."

The Express says of JEFF. DAVIS, that "the man and his systemen, and especially his wretched taste in pushing himself before the public, to the great disturbance of the country and the great injury of his own section of the country, find no indorsers." But it is plain the Express does not believe what it says. If the arch traitor had "no indorsers," he would not find immense audiences and wild applause wherever he goes in the South; he would not be hailed with war songs, and escorted in procession by crowds of ex-rebel soldiers; he would not, in short, either disturb the country at large, nor injure his own section of it, as the Express says he is doing. As a matter of taste, his speeches may or may not be approved. The trouble is that the people who flock to hear and cheer him do not regard them as a matter of taste, but as a matter of principle, and in principle they are with him. The Express does not say that great numbers at Democratic North as well as South, are not also with him.

One of the characteristics of the late struggle in Paris was the freedom with which the women of the Commune participated in it. Whoever is familiar with the works of VICTOR HUGO, will not fail to see that some of this fearless ferocity may be traced to the story with which that unsafe politician surrounds the heroines of the barricades. To the sober American woman, "cutting bread and butter," or pursuing the patient labors of [illegible], the rhetorical dames and demagogues who don't mind staining their hands with blood seem, in HUGO's novels, both fabulous and impossible. But to the excitable French women of the poorer class, whose lovers during the siege of Paris clothed themselves with the mail splendor of the National Guard, the career of the fighting females of revolutionary tradition was "an idea" to be put into immediate practice. Much, we may say to M. HUGO's credit considering his part in these latter days, he was hardly built with much complacency on the horrible tragedy which he has helped to inspire in the women of the barricades of '71.

The Journal des Débats is astonished at the persistency of the Assembly in holding aloof from Paris. Perhaps a continued stench for arms, the pending trial of the original Red ROCHEFORT, the presence of several thousand Communist prisoners not yet shot or sent to the Galleys, and the alleged seeting of popular enthusiasm toward the Versailles troops, make the caution of the Assembly natural. With Bourbon and Orleanist plots, Bonapartist threats and demands, and a lively remembrance of the inflammability of Paris, and the possible paralysis of the "Chief Executive" at Q and Augustine (not the Assembly should prefer the quiet seclusion of Versailles.

The Democratic journals which are anxious to raise a "new departure" from the position of mingled contempt and emptiness which their party has so long occupied, are boasting over the proceedings of the Ohio Convention, which, they say, "spoke out in national and powerful law and order resolutions." But, in fact, that Convention breathe completely any of any manly and hearty expression for law and order. It only mentioned the outrages committed by the Democratic secret societies of the Southern States parenthetically, as a preface to a bitter repudiation of the only action of the United States Government looking to the suppression of those outrages. And though the Tennessee Convention was rather more explicit against the Klukux, the Northern Democratic Press has ignored its action, and has not given it a word of approval.

ROME.

The Press in the Eternal City—Politics—Clerical Literature—The Tone of the Opposition.

ROME, May 19. Correspondence of the London Daily News.

The press in Rome at the present moment presents a very curious spectacle, and it is one which is found repeated in a greater or less degree in the other chief centres of political life in Italy. At least the reputation holds good so far as the organs of the liberal parties are concerned. The cause of liberty of conscience, the progress of free opinion, the antagonism, well considered and carefully reasoned out, to clerical and reactionary influences—these are almost exclusively represented by Jews and Free-thinkers. This most important and widely diffusive power of the Italian Revolution, which dates from the occupation of Rome, much resembles in the literary championship the intellectual state of Germany some five and thirty years ago, when the Hamburg Jew, HEINRICH HEINE, led the way, first in the German, then in the French press, in his opposition to stiff Junkerdom and stolid Philistinism—that opposition destined afterward to be continued by able hands, and to produce such memorable results. The patriarch of Italian journalism, GIACOMO DINA, the editor of the Nazione opinione, is a Jew. The chief representative of the Liberal press also in Rome, EDWARD ARBIB, is a Jew. Another of our most distinguished members, one of the editors of the Nuova Roma, CARLO LEVI—the name speaks for itself—is a Jew. The most accomplished critics of belles lettres, ALESSANDRO ANCONA, in Pisa, and LUIGI CARRERI, of Milan, are Jews; and these are only a very few among the distinguished Jewish writers in the Italian Press. Then there is a phalanx of free thinkers, of whom GUISEPPE CIVINEI, the editor of the Florence Nazione, is the chief, laboring pretty much in the same direction. That direction is one which would never have been taken—certainly never pursued with the same energy by writers professedly orthodox or Catholic—not even by the neo-Catholics of the Gioberti and Rosmini schools. It is a choice of parties between liberty of conscience for its own sake. With the exception of Rome, the potential currents of the Italian press are every day more and more visibly changing their character. The political question is being pushed more in the background, the religious question being brought into prominently forward. Now, experience has more clearly demonstrated that in this new attitude of parties, Clericals journalists do not as yet exist in sufficient abundance in Italy to declare and wage a hearty war against the Church of Rome. In this city at the present moment the tone of the writing which is used by the Papal journals with a violence, an acrimony, an unbridled insolence and arrogance, to which, perhaps, there is nothing equal in any other European city. The clerical journals daily published in Rome are well worth the perusal of foreign Protestants, if only as an object, at least for this, to show them how complete, how unrestrained is the liberty accorded by the Italian Government to its Papal and Ultramontane opponents. I don't know whether the clerical defenders of St. Peter's keys themselves are found in that special character to adopt a style of language which, to my ear, is, in the same with that used by the humble fishermen of Galilee, bears a marvelous resemblance to that heard in Billingsgate. I take up the clerical journals of the morning and I find "abandoned," "Jew," "Sith," "beastly," "the silliest brute," and epithets of equally high flavor. Let me turn to the Jew, the editor of the Liberal, who is addressed by name with these flattering epithets. He is told that he, shameless Jew that he is, is but following the example of the Jews in the days of Rome, who were the real instigators of the Roman Emperor's persecution of the Christians. The article which bears the signature of the editor of the Liberal is, this abuse are calm, courteous, gentlemanly. But they have dealt frankly and fearlessly not merely with the political aspects of the Roman question, but with the principles of liberty of conscience, with the right of free citizens to think and reason and decide on the highest moral problems according to the sincere convictions of their consciences; and this is gall and wormwood to those who lately held absolute sway in the halls of the Inquisition. They feel that they have still a hope, that they have still a chance, that the temporal power which has been wrested from them may yet be restored, if they only retain their moral power, but that empire once lost, their authority will be discarded forever. One must be actually living here in this murky atmosphere of intrigue and espionage, which only a government of priests in full exercise for centuries could have developed, in order to realize the real character of the opposition, social, moral, conjugal, filial, which priests have regularly set in motion, and are hourly working against the new state of things. The surprising part of the matter is the degree to which a campaign, carried on mainly by Jews and free thinkers, in favor of liberty of conscience and of enlightened instruction, finds favor even among a population which, from interest and habit, if not from direct individual conviction, has been so long, so exclusively, so exceptionally and exceptionally Roman Catholic. Still, there is no doubt that such is the fact. The journals representing other phases of liberty have hitherto taken the first professed in front the religious aspect of the Roman question, either as a thing in itself quite sufficient, or as a form of modified barbarism which could best be settled by root-and-branch denunciation. Some journals have either found no favor at all with the Roman population, or have been compelled to change their tactics and to enter the polemical field under the same flag as the Liberal. The Tempo, the paper inspired by RATAZZI, which belongs to the first-class, which has peculiarly the religious aspects of the Roman question, finds scarcely any place in the little interest which its columns from that very cause inspire. The Capitale, on the contrary, began as an organ of the extreme Left with the vociferous cry of a thoroughly Papal policy toward the cardinals, the Jesuits, and all their partisans. It spoke in sufficiently intelligible terms of the great benefit which must accrue to Italy and to civilization by making a clean sweep of all the priests and monks on the first opportunity. But the Capitale has found itself compelled to change its tactics. It has now enlisted in its service the pen of Father GAVAZZI, and is agitates the religious side of the question, and since then has become more extensively read.

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

A Pleasant Weekend of Life in the "Hub"—Appearance of the City—The Beach and Shores—The People and Amusements—General Gossip.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BOSTON, Wednesday, May 31, 1871.

This old city gets a tight grip on one, in spite of all that can be conjured up in its disfavor. New-Yorkers sometimes linger here, reluctant to go, though musing the roar, and rush, and surge of Broadway, the palatial blocks of Fifth-avenue, the monotonous magnificence of Central Park carriage, and the mild sway of the patrician City Fathers. Philadelphians, with a rectangular and level set to their daily walk and conversation, get at length reconciled to its eccentric ins and outs, and mysterious windings, and pass without a serious intellectual wrench from the Press and the Ledger, to the Journal and the Advertiser. The Chicagoan puts here, as in a sweetened religious quiet, a succession of blockade-up Sundays. He finds the venerable little town quaintly picturesque and agreeable, though rather "stuffy," as the Yankee said of the Sound; and though he misses the matchless energy and push of his own mighty but hottest metropolis, the enterprise that goes leaping out into the prairie, and sounding out into the lake—the far-outlier sight of countless grain elevators, Gulf-Rolling Titans of commerce; the familiar crash of swinging bridges, and the familiar fragrance of the early bright river they span. Even we, citizens of Washington, get to love Boston at last, cold, and hilly, and grimly decorous as it seems, after our free and easy cosmopolitan, conglomerated life at the capital, that central rendezvous of American civilization and barbarism, wit, wisdom and wickedness. We miss the grand gladiatorial combats of the Senate, and the high sensational prize-fights of the larger chamber. The occasional boxing-matches and sparrings of the State-house here fail to console us. We miss the dignity, and courtesy, and ease of parliamentary phraseology—the generous laxity of parliamentary morals—the high-bred, cosmopolitan way of calling each other hard names, "wagging their heads and biting their thumbs" at one another, peculiar to our great men—their large, lounging, independent way, in elegant parlors and committee rooms—tilting on rosewood chairs, expectorating on costly Wilton—all with the air of men born to splendor and inured to luxury. We miss our interesting antiquities—the heavy monument, covered over age, in and career, like the Tower of Babel, supposed to be coeval with the Round Towers of Ireland—and the causes, whence origin and use are unknown. We miss our architecture, with its infinite variety of styles, its bizarre and piquant contrasts of splendor and poverty—we miss, most of all, our art. In visiting the Athenaeum, Gallery of Antique Arts, and gazing on the Farnese Hercules, the Antinous, the Discus-thrower and the Apollo, we strive to forget GREENOUGH's Washington, POWERS' Franklin, STOWE's Truro, and BRIMMER's Lincoln—but we can't. Even the immortal agony of the Laocoon is less moving than the memory of the frontier family and "noble savage" of FERRISO. To be sure, the Bronze Webster and Mann of the State-house are some compensations for the Jackson of MILLS, and "the martyred President"—never martyred enough—playing Simon Stylites before our City Hall.

If, twenty years ago, the young traveler from "up-country" exclaimed on nearing the city, and observing single house in process of erection; "Why I ain't Boston done yet?" what can be said of the constructions and reconstructions going on nowadays in every direction? It dazes me when I return to the places which once knew me, and which I once knew so well. I have to steady myself by Faneuil Hall and the old South Church. They are all the buildings I could positively swear to, except, indeed, the dear, dingy old store at the corner of Washington and School streets—"Tickseen." I am always drawn to this gray old nest, from which the ambitious birds have flown, though "'tis a sight that makes me grave." It is haunted, for me, with the ghosts of other days, and with memories of friends lamented and well beloved—some gone over the border, some gone but to brighter and more eligible sites for business and traffic. What a place this used to be, especially on Saturday afternoon, for getting a free sight at the time. Here, many a time we saw LONGFELLOW, coming in from Cambridge, looking wonderfully like a ruddy, hearty, happy English gentleman, with his full lips and beaming blue eyes. That was before the untimely frosting of his hair and beard. The change is too becoming to be saddening. After a brief struggle, the white harmonized with the red, like the rival roses of England. Sometimes there came in with him a tall, graceful woman, with large, tender, dark eyes, and a voice of singular sweetness and pathos—a voice which was a soul in itself; which was at once a prophecy of unutterable sadness and of unutterable peace. Perhaps there came also with him, from the classic shades of Harvard, his neighbor, the poet LOWELL, with his fine, fastidious, studious face—smiling rarely, speaking purely, and wearing his hair parted in the middle, by divine right. Now and then, coming down from Amesbury, suddenly entered the store, as though shot in, the Quakerly-attired form of WHITTIER, alert, and slender, and long. Half eager, half shy was his manner, and both cordial and evasive was his smile, and the glare of his deep-set eyes, glowing with the tender flame of the most humane genius of our time. Perhaps he was met by the next shyest man—HAWTHORNE, coming in from Concord—who talked with him in a corner, in a low, hesitating voice, with a sweet, furtive smile playing about his sensitive, tremulous lips, and calling out gleams of a quaint humor from the melancholy deeps of his dreaming, brooding eyes.

Sometimes EMERSON dropped in, and beamed about him, with that wise, superior look of his, so free from severity and condescension—a curious mingling of Athenian philosophy, fine and esthetic, and Yankee "cuteness," cool and practical. Sometimes came FELTON, the genial Grecian, overflowing with vitality and gusty merriment; more often came big-eyed, and big-brained, and big-hearted EDWIN WHIPPLE, and talked essays and brilliant paragraphs; and HERBY GILES, the wit, the orator, the grand and somber prose-poet, with the sensitiveness of a woman, and the ingenuousness of a child; and STARR KING, the brilliant and magnetic young preacher; and OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, a small but precious package of poetry, humor, and humanity; and SAXE, the handsome, heroic-looking punster. Every few months, BAYARD TAYLOR, fresh from Europe, Africa, or some other continent, came swinging in on the lens that have done him and the world such good service, and "smiled around right chiddly." N. P. WILLIS, with his indestructible buoyancy of step and jauntiness of manner; ALCOTT, well-charged with Orphic sayings; HIGGINSON, eloquent apostle of muscular Christianity, and WENDELL PHILLIPS, inspired apostle of freedom. Here often came scholarly SUMNER, and dainty WILLIAMS, and PRESCOTT, the Milton of historians, and THOREAU, the amateur hermit. Here I have seen CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN, bringing the air of nature even from the stage, into what is called "real life," and her fair young friend, HARRIET PRESCOTT, fresh, and shy, and sweet. Here I saw HARRIET BEECHER STOWE, when that old "Cabin" was new, yet not so well peopled but that it let in through the chinks a Dantian shower of gold. Here, too, I first saw G. P. R. JAMES, a generous, lovable man, and a good novelist, though his "horsemen" do seem to be fast riding back into the feudal times from which they emerged, and ANTHONY TROLLOPE, a beaming, bluff embodiment of English heartiness and good cheer.

In his niche, by a window as the left, could always be found a handsome, happy-looking young man, who smiled welcome on every comer, who abounded in wit and anecdote, and invited fun sport and compliments on all sides. This was Mr. FIELDS. He is older now, but scarce graver. He has grown a little heavier in the flesh if not in the spirit. His well-pruned whiskers have been suffered to run wild and expand into a bounteous beard, and down the centre of that beard there is a streak of pure white, as though he had smiled over it some of the "milk of human kindness"—all the more gives him to drink—or some of the cream of the cow jokes. In an alcove on the other side of the room was always to be found a busy, energetic, active worker, a rare, true man, the soul of honor and sympathetic and unforgetable of friends, the head and heart of the firm. Of him I have much more.

Now I have been going back into the past, when the "Hub" was at the day-star morning freshness, and conversation, like THE other, was in its prime. Back THE other, we have to go, to find the Boston of to-day. I go hence with a heavy heart. The Boston Common has just emerged from the knight of its Summer beauty. The Lady Elms have shed a good deal of lusty vitality in the shape of old trunk and limbs. Its young beauty is in dance as coquettishly as their mothers danced, flittered and danced above the statue of WASHINGTON. The other day I found the way on the "long walk" blocked up by a crowd about a real Punch and Judy show. I stopped, to listen and laugh a while, then wended down Tremont-street, till I was again arrested by a crowd in front of a church, to watch a wedding was going on. So closely does tragedy tread on the heels of comedy in this life.

The expected dramatic event of the week is the appearance of Mr. ARTHUR CHERRY at his own "Globe," which, since the Pechter controversies has turned very smoothly on its axis. I saw Mr. CHERRY in his play, when he was young and I was younger—that is, I am now, and so was then an admirable actor in light comedy. So, I doubt not he will show Boston "a pretty piece of stage business" on Friday night.

POLITICAL.

The New Enrollment of the Republican Points.

Meetings of the inspectors of the new enrollment of the Republican Party were held last night in several districts. The proceedings were harmonious in every case, and a large number of voters came forward to enroll.

At the meeting in the Third District, held at No. 105 East Broadway, 100 names were enrolled. In the Eighth District meeting, held in Grand-street, the number received was [illegible]. In the Tenth District meeting, at Concordia Hall, Nos. 39 and 40 Avenue A, there were 125. In the Thirteenth, corner of Thompson-street and Eighth-avenue, about 200, and in the Fourteenth, at Hamilton Building, thirty-one. Two more meetings for enrollment are to be held tonight in other districts.

Fifteenth Assembly District Union Republican Association.

The regular monthly meeting of the Fifteenth Assembly District Union Republican Association was held last evening at Kroeme's Hall, in West Thirty-third street, the President, HENRY D. LAFAUGH, in the chair.

A resolution offered by Dr. FISHER, approving of the Committee of seven appointed by Messrs. OBERON and SCHULTZ for the reorganization of the district, was adopted.

Mr. LAFAUGH addressed the meeting. He spoke of the efforts the true Republicans in the district had made to make a genuine Republican organization. Their efforts were now about to meet with success, but much work remained to be done. The speaker also referred to Mr. SINCLAIR TOURNY, and thought he owed the people an explanation of his position. Mr. TOURNY had stated, in his presence, that he was in favor of the ordinance of the State Committee, and now he was in arms against it. Against the action of such men as this true Republicans needed to act carefully, as they were ever willing to sell the party to its enemies.

SUNDAY EDITION.

The DAILY TIMES of Sunday, June 4, will contain, in addition to other original articles specially prepared for this issue, the following:

A complete and comprehensive HISTORY OF THE NEW-YORK POLICE. In the fullness and accuracy of its details, this sketch will be found unique. It embraces a period extending over two hundred years, and is replete with suggestive and amusing matter. The original policeman of the American Continent will be found faithfully portrayed. The "Ancient Charleys" and "Leatherheads" of the period immediately before and after the Revolution are duly delineated, and the gradual transition to our present Police system is carefully traced. The trials of long-continued and intimate observation, as well as of patient and extensive research, will be found embodied in this article. As a contribution to local history, and a study of past and contemporary society, the paper will be found especially worthy of attentive perusal.

With the thermometer showing a tendency to remain among the at notes, an article entitled HEAT AND ITS ANTIDOTES will be found no less seasonable than valuable. The working of that peculiarly oriental contrivance, the Thermantidote, will be fully explained, and its adaptibility for use here intelligibly described.

A racy and amusing little catechism entitled THE WHOLE DUTY OF A WARD POLITICIAN, being "a vade mecum for old rotters by a young manner," is recommended to the perusal of all whom it may concern.

A paper of much interest has been compiled under the title of THE LIFE OF HENRI ROCHEFORT. The chief points will be given of the highly eventful career of the determined assailant of the Second Empire, late leader of the Red Republican movement in Paris. The mass of plays, pamphlets and political treatises of which he was the author will be recapitulated, and the various duels and other exciting episodes in the life of the Lanternier will be related in detail.

THE SPIRIT OF THE RELIGIOUS PRESS continues to form an interesting feature of our Sunday edition.

Under the department of CURRENT LITERATURE will be found the usual good story and well-selected and arranged series of extracts from the newest books and magazines.

This week's DRAMATIC SUMMARY will be found unusually piquant. It will include a short local notice of the troubles of opera-bouffe, affording a glimpse behind the scenes of the Grand-Opera-House. A notice of the appearance of GOUPON's original "Mephisto" in Boston will likewise be found of interest.

In the department devoted to MILITARY GOSSIP will be found notes of military movements throughout the United States and the Dominion of Canada, as also other local items of general interest to military men.

The column headed NOTES AND COMMENTS will as usual be distinguished for conciseness and variety.

How to proceed in the Spring and Summer months, as this is the time that the system naturally undergoes a change in both young and old:

A PITEIFUL CONDITION.

It is a sad thing to pass through life only half alive. Yet there are thousands whose habitual condition is one of languor and debility. They complain of no specific disease; they suffer no positive pain; but they have no relish for anything which affords mental or sensuous pleasure to their more robust and energetic fellow-beings.

In nine cases out of ten this state of lassitude and torpor arises from a morbid stomach. Indigestion destroys the energy of both mind and body. When the waste of nature is not supplied by a due and regular assimilation of the food, every organ is starved, every function interrupted.

Now, what does common sense suggest under these circumstances of depression? The system needs rousing and strengthening; not merely for an hour or two, to sink afterward into a more pitiable condition than ever, (as it assuredly would do if an ordinary alcoholic stimulant were resorted to,) but radically and permanently.

How is this desirable object to be accomplished? The answer to this question, founded on the unvarying experience of a quarter of a century, is easily given. Infuse new vigor into the digestive organs by a course of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. Do not waste time in administering temporary remedies, but with the application by compounding the fountain-head of physical strength and energy, the great organ upon which all the other organs depend for their nurture and support.

By the very fact that a dose of some of the great vegetable tonic and invigorant have been taken, the feeble frame of the dyspeptic will begin to feel its benign influence. Appetite will be created, and with appetite the capacity to digest what it craves. Perseverance until the cure is complete—until healthful blood, fit to be the material of flesh and muscle, bone and nerve, and brain, flows through the channels of circulation, instead of the watery pabulum with which they have heretofore been imperfectly nourished.

A NEW VOLUME IN THE

ILLUSTRATED LIBRARY OF WONDERS.

WONDERS OF EUROPEAN ART.

Translated from the French by M. VIARDOT.

With 14 Illustrations, 1 vol., 12mo, $1 50.

This volume, although a companion to the old on Italian Art, lately published, is an independent treatise in itself. It succinctly, but intelligently, and with great discrimination, notices the great works of the Spanish, German, Flemish, Dutch and French schools. Engravings of the representative masterpieces of these different schools are also given. Like the other volumes of the LIBRARY of WONDERS, this gives in a small space and inexpensive but attractive form, information which, if sought for independently, could only be obtained by consulting numerous and expensive treatises.

Twenty-two volumes of the Illustrated Library of Wonders now published. A set of twenty volumes, uniformly bound in half-roan, with gilt top, in a neat walnut case, for $30, (the rack gratis.) Descriptive catalogues, with specimen illustrations, sent on application.

This book may be sent by mail on receipt of price by publishers,

INSURANCE CONVENTION.

Ninth Day's Proceedings—Thanks to Everybody—Final Adjournment.

At the morning session of the Insurance Convention, yesterday, Mr. BRYANT, Actuary of the New-York Insurance Department, submitted his views in reference to the form of balance sheet to be adopted by life insurance companies. He advised that all unreliable assets be excluded from the debit side of the account, and that none but reliable and available assets be inserted thereon. The balance sheet was then handed to experts for their consideration.

The various blanks for fire and life returns were next taken up and adopted, and a committee appointed to revise the proof-sheets and see that they are correctly printed and distributed.

On motion of Mr. SHERLS, it was

Resolved, That this Convention recommend to the Legislatures of the different States the enactment of provisions authorizing the officers having charge of the administration of insurance laws to make use of such blanks for annual statements, as are adopted by this Convention.

Mr. SHERLS offered a resolution calling on the Legislature to require larger capital from life insurance companies hereafter to be chartered. The motion was laid on the table.

At the afternoon session the Convention agreed to:

1. Uniform forms of annual statements.
2. The requirement of deposits from companies only in States where organized.
3. The appointment of but one attorney by each company in each State where it transacts business to receive service of process.
4. And several other important reforms tending to a more uniform and confidence of the great insurance system, and to harmonious and economical supervision of the executive State Insurance Department.

The Convention resolved to perfect at its Century session, to the best of its ability, the work begun, and to fully carry out the great objects for which it was called together.

On the motion of Mr. CALDWELL it was

Resolved, That criticisms of an independent and capable and moral insurance Press are calculated to be of value to the community, and to all interests and affairs connected in any way therewith.

Resolutions of thanks were passed to the President, Hon. GEO. W. MILLARD, and to the Secretary, Col. H. S. OGDEN, for their efficient services. A vote of thanks was also passed to the reporters, for the fidelity of their reports.

The Convention then adjourned to meet in this City on the 18th of October next.

The Charge of Bribery Against School Trustee Riley—Mr. Riley on the Stand.

The investigation in the case of TERENCE RILEY, a School Trustee of the Twenty-second Ward, who is charged with receiving bribes, was resumed, yesterday, before the Committee on Teachers of the Department of Public Instruction.

JOHN D. BUMSTEN testified that he is Principal of School No. 16; had known RILEY since 1867; witness has also acted as clerk to the School Trustees of the Twenty-second Ward; never heard of RILEY receiving, or for his influence to procure, appointments as a School Trustee; the janitor, QUINN, according to the records of the meeting of the School Trustees, was discharged for general incompetency; he written charges were against QUINN; witness had charge of the minutes of the Board made to the Board, that QUINN had been guilty of such and such neglects of duty; on April 18 of last year a committee was appointed to examine into the complaints against QUINN; witness was present when QUINN was removed; was; that he allowed coal to be carried away from the school-house; RILEY took no active part in QUINN's removal.

Deputy-Comptroller CHAS. O'CONOR, on QUINN's moral character, never made any report; the immorality complained of was that QUINN did not pay his debts; he did not know that QUINN ever received notice of the charges against him; the Comptroller of the City (UNDERHILL) told witness not to notify QUINN of the charges against him; he investigation ever took place.

TERENCE RILEY was then put on the witness stand, and testified as follows: Have been associated with the public school System years; have known QUINN since 1866; Mr. PERRY asked witness to have QUINN appointed; never received any money; never received money from CHRIST or any other man, directly or indirectly, in connection with this appointment; never received money from Mr. PERRY in any way in connection; never told any one that he had received 100 for QUINN's appointment; never told any one that it would require $600 to get the appointment; there were six applicants for the position; never at any time received money from QUINN for any purpose; never gave any money to QUINN; never told QUINN requesting an interview; never called on him by money at any place; had an interview with QUINN after he was discharged; in which QUINN said that whatever had occurred he was innocent.

Cross-examined—Have known PATRICK GOLDING for four years; had some words with him two years ago; at the time of QUINN's appointment, witness was a member of the Board of Education; GOLDING is in the Supreme Court; now hold the position of Court Officer in the Superior Court; in 1868 was in the liquor trade; in 1869 was out of business; never went under the hammer; never told GOLDING that witness had no power as to whether he had not signed pay-rolls with the name of Michael Kelly in the Bureau of Lands and Places, drawn the salary and taken the money; never said that he had no power; never said he received an appointment from ALEX. WARD, Superintendent of Lands and Places, under the name of Michael Kelly.

The Committee then adjourned to Tuesday next at 3 P. M.

The Dinner-Plate Homicide—Investigation by the Coroner and Discharge of the Accused.

Coroner SCHIRMER held an inquest, yesterday, at the City Hall, in the case of BERNARD DEVINE, who died from the effects of a blow upon the head with a dinner-plate which was given him Wednesday by his wife, MARIA DEVINE, at their residence in the tenement No. 416 East Eighteenth-street. It appeared from the testimony taken that the parties had been married six years, during all of which time DEVINE had been in the habit of drinking to excess, and did little or nothing for the support of his wife. Tuesday last he was especially drunk, striking his wife several blows as a result of a quarrel about boarding a child whose mother had fallen from a window of the house and been killed, and during this affray he also struck MARY JANE GILLEN, a daughter of his wife by a former husband. Wednesday afternoon Miss GILLEN, on entering the room of the deceased, saw DEVINE strike his wife a blow with his fist, knocking her down near the table, which was laid for dinner, and the prostrate woman reaching up seized a dinner plate which she threw at her assailant, it struck him on the forehead, causing a cut from which the blood spurted, but notwithstanding this he continued to strike her, and had seized her by the throat when he was intimidated by the entrance and interference of some women of the house, and he then ran downstairs. When he reached the street he met Officer THOMAS DIXON, of the Eighteenth Precinct, who seeing him bleeding, and learning the cause, took deceased to a drug-store, but his wound was not treated there, and he was taken to Bellevue Hospital without having received any surgical attention, and with the blood spurting from the severed artery.

The testimony of Dr. CUSHMAN, who made the post-mortem examination, was, that death had been caused by hemorrhage, in consequence of the severing of the temporal artery. Coroner SCHIRMER then addressed the jury, saying that he believed if the life of deceased would have been saved had he received surgical attention promptly, or had the officer simply pressed his hand upon the wound and kept it there until he reached the hospital. The jury then rendered a verdict that Mrs. DEVINE had thrown the plate without any intention of taking life, and in self-defense. She was thereupon discharged from custody by the Coroner.

The head-quarters of the organization will be at the Astor House. The Executive Committee, of which Major-Gen. CHAS. E. GRAHAM is Chairman, is making strenuous efforts to render the second meeting of the Army of the James a memorable one. The Polar Expedition—Preparations Complete.

A dispatch was received yesterday by the agent of the Arctic expedition, under the command of Capt. C. F. HALL, from the Navy Department in Washington, ordering the engineers, seamen and firemen, shipped at this port, at once to join the Polaris at the Washington Navy-yard. The two Esquimaux, HANNAH and JOE, who go out on the expedition, the first as the tailoress to manufacture the fur-clothing and the last as interpreter, will meet the Polaris here on Monday or Tuesday at the furthest. The little steamer was to have arrived here on the 20th ult., but was unavoidably detained by the failure of her scientific corps to receive all their instruments. When the Polaris arrives she will steam up the harbor and anchor at the man-of-war anchorage off the Battery, when free access will be given to all parts of the ship. It is hardly thought possible that the little vessel will remain in harbor longer than a week, when she will start on her long and perilous voyage, stopping only at St. Johns, N. F., in her route along the North American seaboard.

The Collision Between the Hansa and Rhein—Statement of the Chief Officer of the Former.

Yesterday morning the TIMES contained the news of the terrible collision at sea of the steam-ship Hansa, of the Bremen line, and the bark Rhein, from Rotterdam bound to this port, resulting in the instant loss of the latter, with the Captain and seven of her crew. When the Hansa arrived, yesterday, one of our reporters visited her, and was introduced to Mr. LANGE, the Chief Officer. This gentleman said, in giving his brief version of the accident, that he had little to add to what the TIMES had already published. But despite the demands made by the clamor-barking newsmongers upon his time, he gave the following account of the disaster:

On the 31st of May—at 3½ in the morning, we were about 300 miles from New-York, outside of Sandy Hook in a dense fog, and going at only half speed; we had six men on the look-out inside the officers of the deck; two on the forecastle, two on the forward, and two on the bridge; our bell and fog signal were going, and we had no intimation of immediate danger; at that hour she was forward going out "all, ho!" "Where away?" was asked, and answered "right ahead;" immediately the helm was put hard to starboard and the engine stopped; we reversed; but before this we either could be into the Hansa forward ahead and struck the bark cutting her right through. She sunk at once and while she was going down her watch on deck leaped on board of our steamer and were saved; the rest were lost. Those rescued number five men and two women, Norwegians; the look-out men are gone, including Capt. Ahnemann. The bark was on the starboard tack and presented her weather side to us. [She had no light except that abaft the mizen rigging and it could not be seen by us. After the accident we remained near the spot where the Rhein was last seen for an hour and a half in the hope of picking up somebody who might have been preserved by clinging to a boat or spar. But we saw no more of her or those who went down in her. In conclusion, the officer said that nobody on board of either craft was to blame for the unlucky issue, that the night was so dark and the fog so thick that nothing could be distinguished twenty feet from the Hansa.

Fires in May—Valuable Statistics and Suggestions.

From the report of Fire-Marshal MCSTEDON, made yesterday to the Police Commissioners, it appears that during the month of May the City had 123 fires, involving a loss of $46,935, of which $8,980 was uninsured. The average amount of loss per fire was $381 09, and the percentage of insured loss to the amount of insurance 7.00 per cent. This exhibit will compare most favorably with that of May, 1870. The number of fires during that month were 95; loss $221,600; insurance, $200,000; average loss per fire, $4,015 95; percentage of loss to insurance, 21.10 per cent. Fires caused by carelessness in use of fire, lights, &c., are largely on the increase, being 265 per cent. more during the past month than in May, 1866. The number of fires occurring from the use of kerosene, liquid gas and other compounds of a similar dangerous character, are also increasing, being 163 per cent. more for the past month than during the month of May, 1870. It is hoped that the energetic and thorough enforcement of the very stringent laws enacted by the Legislature during the last Winter regulating the sale and use of these dangerous fluids for illuminating and heating purposes, will result in a great saving of both life and property. The causes of the several fires are classified as follows: 30 were caused by the carelessness of occupants and employes in the use of fire, lights, &c.; 4 by children playing with fire and matches; 5 by defective flues and chimneys; 17 by gas leaks and explosions, &c.; 23 by kerosene, liquid gas, &c.; 3 by overheated stoves; 3 by spontaneous combustion of rags, &c.; 7 by sparks from chimneys, &c.; 3 by stove-pipes insecure and overheated; and the remainder originated from a variety of accidental causes. The number of fires in which the loss was less than $100 was 32, between $100 and $1,000 was 30, between $1,000 and $5,000 was 6, between $5,000 and $10,000 was 4—total, 123. Loss on buildings, $12,610; on stock, $33,125; total, $46,935. Insurance on buildings, $170,700; on stock, $229,900; total, $400,600. Estimated loss on buildings, $2,775; on stock, $6,175; total, $8,980.

Custom-House Affairs—The Bonded Warehouses—Statistics.

For the past six months an investigation has been in progress, by direction of the Collector, with a view to ascertain the condition of the various bonded warehouses. The books for six years past have been overhauled, and in some cases it has been found that hundreds of packages of goods would be charged to a particular warehouse on which no record of delivery could be found. A further investigation would reveal the fact that a greater portion of the goods had been delivered, and the missing packages were very few in number. This investigation has resulted in making the store-keepers more careful, by showing them how their property was liable to be plundered, and it has shown the warehouse men the necessity of greater care on their part if they would preserve themselves from loss.

The statistics of the Warehouse Department, Col. THOMAS L. JAMES Deputy Collector, for May, exhibit the following facts:

The Secretary of the Treasury yesterday announced officially that the fancy seal locks would not be used for warehouses, except where new ones were required, and then they would be used without the scale; further, that the locks would be put on at the expense of the Government; and further, that the General Order stores would be required to use the scale as well as the locks.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

Both the legal sales noticed to take place at the Exchange yesterday, (June 2,) instead of being consummated as expected, were adjourned as follows: Sale of property on Centre-street, adjourned by ROBERTS & MCGUIRE until Friday of next week, and sale of property on Cannon, near Rivington-street, adjourned by MULLER, WILKINS & CO., until June 16. No further business was transacted.

In reference to the sale of suburban lots at Whitestone, Long Island, on Thursday, conducted by A. J. BLEECKER, SON & CO., but little can be said, for although the attendance was quite large, an indisposition to bid upon the property offered was noticeable, and, in consequence, but few lots were disposed of. None of the houses were sold, and the general result of the transaction was unsatisfactory to all parties interested. The enterprise, as has been before said, is well worthy the attention of investors, the improvements made being first-class, and calculated to greatly enhance the value of the property. The streets are well laid out, macadamized, graded, sewered, guttered and curbed, while the houses already constructed are handsome and convenient. To offset the disagreeable alluded to, a large amount of money has been expended, and it is therefore to be regretted that better success was not achieved. In all twenty-six lots were sold, but the prices were not such as to justify a continuance of the auction, and it was accordingly adjourned. A detailed report in regard to whether a second attempt to dispose of an additional number of lots during the present season will be made or not is as yet unascertained.

For today the only public auctions to be held as advertised are suburban sales, at which three will occur, in the following localities:

At Mamaroneck, in Westchester County, a liberal sale, announced as peremptory, of 400 lots adjacent to and near the depot on the line of the New-Haven Railway in the town named, sale at 12 M.

At Bergenne, N. J., under the charge of A. D. MELLICK, JR., & BRO., O. H. PIERSON, auctioneer, 100 city lots, embraced in the block, bounded respectively by Oakland and Maple avenues and Avenues A and B, a good property. Sale at 2 P. M. Free passes for 2 o'clock train from New-York to be obtained of the auctioneers, No. 6 Pine-street.

At Tottenville, Staten Island, S. DINGEE, auctioneer, twelve valuable lots of ground, together with a villa house in the village named, situated on the main road to Amboy Ferry and near the railway depot; also two additional country residences; sale at 11 A. M. Reports of the above transactions will appear on Monday, if received in season.

For next week several sales of importance are projected, a full list of which will be published as usual on Monday.

WASHINGTON.

The New-York Central Tax Case—A Strange Admission—A Blunder on the Christian Association—The Polaris—Indian Affairs—The Reuben Bigamy Case—The Colored Strikers—Revenue Old Stamps to be Severely Punished.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The New-York Central Railroad Company have associated with their other legal advisers in the scrip tax case, CALEB CUSHING, or, at least, the arrangements have all been made but paying over the retainer. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, unless overruled by Secretary BOUTWELL, will refuse any offer of compromise of the character stated yesterday, and cause the immediate collection of the tax. Meantime the company is exposing its evasion of correct returns in a curious manner. It has caused to be published a statement from its accounts to show that it really does owe the Government $216,879 for taxes not assessed in consequence of incorrect returns for the four years in which the $25,000,000 which the Government has assessed, accrued. Now, the fact is that the published statement of accounts does not include this $25,000,000 at all, but ignores it entirely. So the existing case is not explained, but on the other hand, if the statement they publish is correct, the road must pay $200,000 more than the Government has yet assessed. The strenuous efforts made to secure delay in an irregular manner, increase the belief that the Company knows it cannot sustain its case before the Courts to which the law entitles an appeal.

A FOOLISH SLANDER.

A scurrilous paragraph appeared a day or two since in the World, purporting to have been telegraphed from this city, alleging that the proprietor of the hotel where a majority of the Young Men's Christian Association delegates stopped had stated that they purloined numerous articles of hotel property, &c. Now, the regular correspondent of the World, who is a gentleman, never sent any such paragraph to his journal. A majority of the delegates did not stop at any one hotel, nor at all of them combined, 600 out of 800 being accommodated at private houses. A majority of those that did stop at the hotels stopped at the Ebbitt House, and Mr. C. C. WILLARD, the proprietor thereof, to whom some readers have attributed the authorship of the paragraph in question, resents it in most indignant terms, as does every employe of that hotel. By those resident here who know the character of the man who heedlessly gave utterance to the statement no attention was paid to it, but as inquiries come from other places, which exhibit some annoyance at the insult, this statement appears necessary.

FURTHER DETENTION OF THE POLARIS.

The Polaris will not be ready to sail from here Saturday, as was announced, but will be detained till some day next week, probably Tuesday. Secretary ROBESON, in company with GEO. H. BOKER, the Philadelphia poet, visited the vessel at the Navy-yard today.

INDIAN MATTERS.

Gen. PARKER, the Indian Commissioner, went to New-York this afternoon, to look after the shipment of Indian supplies, and will not return till next week. It is understood that VINCENT COLYER has been designated by the Indian Board to go to Arizona and New-Mexico, to make peace with the Apache Indians.

THE BIGAMY TRIAL.

Ex-Congressman BOWEN's bigamy trial, today, got no further than the closing arguments by counsel. The case will be given to the jury tomorrow.

SECRETARY FISH IN NEW-YORK.

Secretary FISH left for New-York on the 9 o'clock train to-night. He will be absent about a week.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES.

The expenditures by the Government by warrants from the Treasury Department, during May, were as follows:

Civil and miscellaneous and foreign intercourse	$3,107,821
War Department	2,620,812
Navy	2,777,929
Interior, pensions and Indians	4,064,126
Total	$12,730,689

The above expenditures do not include payments on account of the principal or interest of the public debt.

THE COLORED STRIKERS.

The strike among the colored laborers on the public and private work continues. The strikers forcibly prevented men in various places from resuming work today, while others, being approached by gangs of strikers, threw down their tools and joined them. The strikers attempted to take the tools from another party on the street, when a Lieutenant of Police, with his squad, appeared and ordered the strikers away under pain of arrest. The crowd by this time had increased to 800 men. Subsequently, Major RICHARDS ordered out the mounted force, and this had the effect of intimidating the strikers in another locality from executing their threats against the working laborers. A brick was thrown and struck a colored man. This might have led to sanguinary results, had not the Police been in such force as to overawe those disposed to be riotous. Laborers at several places resumed work in the course of the day, under promise they should receive whatever prices shall be agreed on by the Committee appointed at the mass-meeting last night. The Police force, mounted and foot, was held in reserve at head-quarters this afternoon, ready to move to any point which might demand their attention.

THE BOWEN BIGAMY CASE.

Argument began today in the Bowen bigamy case, but not concluded. Counsel for the Government asked to submit prayers for instructions—if the jury believe the paper purporting to be the record of the divorce in New-York was obtained by fraud, or not copied from the original papers, they cannot regard it as a decree of divorce. If it was a true copy, it is void, if the jury further believe that BOWEN and FRANCES BOWEN, or either of them, were at the time residents of the Confederate States; and if they find that BOWEN was a soldier of the Confederate States in 1864, he cannot be regarded as having been a citizen of New-York at the time the alleged divorce in New-York was obtained.

SPANISH CLAIMS.

Among the claims that will come before the United States and Spanish Commission, soon to commence business in this city, are those of ANGARICA, CASSANOVA and MORA, which are contained in the official list of the Secretary of State, heretofore sent to Congress. This fact, disposes of recent statements that they have been excluded, and that measures have recently been taken against Spain to enforce their consideration.

PAYMENT OF THREE PER CENT. CERTIFICATES.

The Secretary of the Treasury directs the Assistant Treasurer at New-York to notify the holders of three per cent. certificates, issued under the acts of March 2, 1867, and July 28, 1866, bearing date Dec. 14, 1867, to March 14, 1868, of the denomination of $5,000 each, numbers 1,374 to 1,710 inclusive, and of the denomination of $10,000 each, numbers 1,685 to 1,732 inclusive, that such certificates will be paid on presentation at his office, and that from and after July 21, 1871, such certificates will cease to bear interest and will be no longer available as a portion of the the lawful money reserve in the possession of any national banking association. The amount of certificates described is $1,760,000.

REUSE OF OLD STAMPS.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has written a letter to the Collector of the First Maine District concerning the case of a party in that district who had submitted a proposition for a compromise of the claims of the United States against him for having offered for sale articles of perfumery, &c., upon which stamps had been affixed which had been used previously. The articles, amounting in value to $172, had been seized by the proper official, upon which an offer of compromise was made, the party proposing to pay $200 and cost to affix proper stamps. This proposition was rejected by the Commissioner, who, in his letter to the Collector, says: "In this connection I have to say that the above decision is not given because of the inadequacy of the offer in compromise of any supposed damage to the United States in this particular case, but because of the urgent necessity which there is, in my opinion, for severely punishing the offence of reusing stamps, and the determination to afford no relief to wrong-doers in that direction. The reuse of stamps is a growing evil with which the office has to contend daily, and which it is proposed to check as far as possible by a strict enforcement of the penalties. You are directed to lay the facts of this case immediately before the United States District-Attorney, and request him to proceed against the party and his property for the recovery of all fines, penalties and forfeitures which have been incurred.

THE KUKLUX INVESTIGATION.

The Subcommittee of the Congressional Ku-Klux Committee today sent a telegram to Judge MILLER, Collector of Mobile, who left here yesterday on his way home, to return to Washington. He is to be examined as a witness regarding the general state of feeling in Alabama since the passage of the Kuklux law.

SOUTHERN CLAIMS.

Among the cases to come before the Southern Claims Commission, on Tuesday, is that of VINCENT P. COLLETT, at Arlington, Va., for wood cut from his property for military railroad use, between $15,000 and $16,000.

THE COMMISSIONERSHIP OF CUSTOMS.

There is quite an active canvass for the office of Commissioner of Customs, made vacant by the retirement of NATHAN SARGENT. Various candidates, through their friends, are pressing for the appointment.

NEW NATIONAL DEPOSITORIES.

The Second National Bank of New-York and the Planters' National Bank of Richmond have been designated as depositories and financial agents of the United States.

INSPECTION OF VESSELS.

The Secretary of the Treasury has decided that vessels built in the United States for foreign are not required to be inspected, under the United States Inspection laws.

CUBAN AFFAIRS.

Valmaseda's Plans and Position—Efforts to Secure His Removal—Importation of Coolies—An Anti-Album Crusade—Miscellaneous Havana Gossip.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, May 27, 1871.

VALMASEDA is making the necessary preparations to leave for the Central Department on or about the 10th of June, although public report asserted that he would go this week. But VALMASEDA is smart enough not to depart on a fool's errand, and his knowledge of the country and the people he has to deal with is such that he will not undertake any campaign where he commands in person, without effecting such arrangements as will prevent him from meeting with disaster, and consequent ridicule and general discredit, and guarantee at least some sort of success. His own expression in this respect is significant of what he needs. "I must have provisions for the troops at points to which I intend to send them, and they must be placed in localities whence they can move with celerity to easy supporting distances." Although VALMASEDA is feasting the prominent civil and military authorities, and they are feasting him, it is nevertheless certain that he has quite a number of enemies among the Spaniards, the most prominent being the men who were loudest in their clamor to have RODAS removed and VALMASEDA appointed. Until very lately VALMASEDA has always enjoyed the reputation of being a sanguinary and blood-thirsty tyrant; since his advent to the supreme power he is accused of being the very reverse, and the savagely-inclined portion of the Spaniards are in no way backward in expressing their disappointment in this respect. This ferocity, and his reported unforgiving spirit toward the Cubans, added to his exploits as a soldier, and the manifest injustice done him by the Dulce and Rodas cliques, made him the favorite of the largest portion of the Spaniards. Many of them believed that in a political sense VALMASEDA would prove another Concha, but VALMASEDA has disappointed them to a certain extent, and now a small ultra clique works mightily to have VALMASEDA removed and CONCHA appointed. These machinations will prove unavailing while VALMASEDA goes personally to the interior and superintends operations; if he is successful, he can remain Captain-General during any period he pleases; if he is unsuccessful he must make way for CONCHA or some other General of the Yzabel party, as the men of the September revolution, beginning with SERRANO and ending with almost anybody, are not in very good odor here. Those well versed in the intrigues of the day assure me that the Vos de Cuba is slowly but surely pursuing a course which will make VALMASEDA's cause and proceedings distasteful to the Spaniards, and they cite the late "blood and thunder" articles of the Vos as a proof that the paper is opposed to VALMASEDA. There is some appearance of truth in this, and the reason of this change on the part of the Vos is ascribed to the narrow-minded and autocratic policy of the present Censor, whose decisions are sustained by VALMASEDA. The Vos very naturally never refers openly to VALMASEDA, but its editorial column advocates a course entirely contrary to the Captain-General's well-known policy. As the Vos has more influence among the noisy element than the always non-committal Diario, these articles are producing effect.

COOLIE LABOR IMPORTED.

A number of prominent planters have formed a society to buy coolies in China and bring them here. It is to be a joint stock concern of fifty subscribers, with a capital of one million of dollars, and the Chinese are to be distributed according to the number of shares subscribed by each. The proposed introduction of Mexicans is not effective, as the Mexicans know the fate which awaits them. The Chinese are the only people stupid enough to contract to work on a Cuban plantation.

AN ANTI-ALBUM CRUSADE.

The Vos de Cuba finds a great many things which the people at large do not generally observe. One of its latest attacks is against albums, wherein love-sick swains were in the habit of writing their effusions. The Vos has seen some of these albums, which contained "inconvenient" compositions, but fails to explain of what nature, and only advises the owners of these albums to tear them out, as such compositions might fall into the hands of the young, lead them from the righteous path, and serve as the base for uncalled-for insurrections like the present one. That is to say, these compositions have a political character. But of what use is it to destroy a page in a Cuban album, when almost every Cuban mother teaches her child to hate the Spaniards? To carry out the universal fatherland-saving maxim of the Spaniards, there is no other remedy than to sink the island for a few days under water, and destroy the people on it. The Diario has also found a "mare's nest," and explains why some of the Cubans have become such sudden defenders of absolutist measures and admirers of DON CARLOS. It seems the Cubans mean DON CARLOS CESPEDES, and not DON CARLOS, the pretender to the Spanish throne. The Diario thinks the joke a poor one, but advises the perpetrators not to repeat it, as it might be productive of broken heads.

SUICIDE.

A young man employed in a commercial house committed suicide on Wednesday evening by swallowing a dose of arsenic. Disappointed love was the cause, the lady of his choice having given him the cold shoulder and married a wealthy old gentleman on Tuesday. The old gent is a three-fourths of mulatto, but yellow gold changes a color with remarkable success.

INSTANTANEOUS WELLS.

The Government has received the necessary machinery to dig the so-called instantaneous wells, the machinery being equal to that employed by the English Army during the war in Abyssinia.

ILL-LUCK OF PRISONERS.

The Cubans will be furious this week when they learn of the new plan which the Government has put into operation in order to utilize the services of those of their countrymen who have been sentenced to the Penitentiary for treason. Some of these Cubans so sentenced had been kindly treated by Col. POEYSERO, the late chief of the prison, who had even given some of them positions, with small salaries. Next week about sixty of these prisoners will be sent to the new military line near Cinco de Avila, and be employed in constructing roads and forts. This order, of course, only refers to such as are physically able to do so.

THE SEASON.

The heat is intense, and the vomito is on the increase; as but few Spaniards arrive nowadays from the old country, the number of deaths is less; but several Cubans from the interior have fallen victims to the disease.

QUASIMODO.

AN INDIAN RAID IN TEXAS.

An Indian and Mule Train Attacked—Seven Men Killed—Gen. Sherman's Orders.

The St. Louis Democrat publishes the following private letter, just received in that city, giving additional information of the Indian raid and battle in Texas, near Richardson:

JACKSBORO, Texas, May 29, 1871.

R. P. Howell, Esq., Agent El Paso Mail Line:

DEAR SIR: You will remember we were wishing that some one of the numerous Indian depredations that are constantly occurring on our frontier might happen while Gen. SHERMAN was in the country, and close to the scene of destruction, so that he would be fully impressed with the great necessity of more efficient military operations to prevent them. Gen. SHERMAN, as you know, arrived at Fort Richardson on Wednesday night (and is just now leaving for Fort Sill) and on Thursday the troops that camped at Rock Creek the night before came in. The same day, Thursday (18th) afternoon, a band of Indians, variously estimated at 10 to 200, attacked HENRY WARREN's train of ten wagons and 41 head of mules, 20 miles west of here, and 1½ miles beyond the timber going into Salt Creek prairie. In the fight, which was short and destructive, seven men were killed and one wounded. The remainder, five in number, escaped to the timber, and arrived here yesterday morning. Twenty men from Richardson were immediately dispatched to bury the dead, and later in the day Col. MCKENZIE, with four companies of cavalry, started in pursuit, with instructions from Gen. SHERMAN to chase the Indians into Fort Sill, by which time he would be there, and if proved that they were Fort Sill Indians, he would have a stop put to the Indian trade in that quarter. Although the mules were shod, as it generally happens, it rained heavy, and, of course, will put out all trails, leaving but little chance of a successful pursuit.

The Latest Swindling Dodge of New-York Thieves in the Country.

From the Newburg Journal, June 2.

For about a week past a few rough-looking sharpers from New-York have been operating in this vicinity, swindling the farmers by what is known as the cloth dodge. They went around by twos, and played their game in the following manner: One of the two would go to a house and offer for sale a piece of cloth at a very low price. If he sold the cloth there his pal would reach the house soon after he left it, and ask the inmates whether a man had sold them any cloth. When the cloth was shown to the second comer, he would instantly claim it, saying that it had been stolen from him, and the purchasers, to avoid being implicated in any trouble, would of course surrender the cloth, and lose what they had paid for it. It is said that these sharpers made Newburg their headquarters, but carefully refrained from practicing their little game here. Police-officer ANDREWS has been watching them, not liking their looks, but not being able to bring anything directly against them until today. But the left town for New-York last night, leaving, it is said, some unpaid bills behind them. If exchanges will refer to the "dark ways" of this gang of New-Yorkers, we live by their wits, and other people's expense, farmers in other sections may be put on their guard against the swindlers.

More Car Accidents.

At 6 o'clock last evening, SAMUEL ROSENBERG, aged two and a half years, while playing in the street, in front of the residence of his parents, No. 134 Third-street, was run over by Car No. 10 of the Avenue C line and instantly killed. The remains were taken in charge by the Seventeenth Precinct Police, to await an inquest, which will held today.

CATHARINE CUMINSKEY, aged six years, of No. 229 West Forty-sixth-street, when playing in the roadway at the corner of Forty-third-street and Seventh-avenue last evening, was knocked down by one of the horses attached to car No. 19, Seventh-avenue line, and being thrown under the car, one of the wheels passed over her right leg, fracturing it below the knee. The driver of the car was looked up at the Twenty-second Precinct Station-house.

Destructive Fire in Twenty-Fifth-Street.

About 5 o'clock last evening fire was discovered in the rear part of the iron foundry of WOODWARD & SWIFT, Nos. 513 to 519 West Twenty-fifth-street. Before the flames were extinguished a damage of $3,000 was done to stock and machinery, which is insured for $19,000. The building, which is owned by WM. REMSEN, No. 5 Wall-street, will require $8,000 for repairs, but is fully insured. EDWARD E. MERRALL, manufacturing street springs, lost $1,000 in damage to stock, but had it insured for $1,800 in the Williamsburg City Insurance Company. During the fire several firemen narrowly escaped injury by the fall of a floor, and Assistant Engineer RHOADS was grazed by an avalanche of bricks tumbling from the top of the front wall, but was not seriously hurt. The origin of the fire could not be definitely ascertained.

Sympathy With the Communists—Proposed Mass-Meeting.

It is contemplated by the International Working Men's Union to express their sympathy with the Paris Reds, in a public meeting, to which the general public will be invited. To aid in bringing about this meeting, one of the sections (of which there are eighteen in this City, numbering nearly 5,000 men,) met last night, at No. 10 Stanton-street. The general opinion expressed was that the people of Paris were being treated too harshly at present, no matter what faults they have already committed, and therefore they would call for a public expression of feeling in disapproval thereof.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

The excessive heat of the last few days has raised a very strong desire in the minds of the overworked and poorly-paid portion of the community to learn something about their chances of free bathing this Summer. Thus far, according to the statement of the Chief Clerk of the Board of Public Works, the "Boss" has not given any instructions regarding it, nor does it appear that the Board of Apportionment has set apart any fund for the liquidation of the expense of keeping and managing the free baths.

On Thursday evening a disabled horse was removed on Mr. BENGH's ambulance to MAHAN's stable in East Broadway. Dr. HERD, a veterinary surgeon, was called in to prescribe for the animal. BENGH's officer said the horse was paralyzed in his hind quarters. HERD said the hip was out of joint. CONKLIN, the officer, said "the man who said so did not know his business." The veterinary surgeon then struck CONKLIN a fearful blow in the face. He was arrested and locked up, and yesterday morning committed by Judge LEDWITH under $500 bail. Upon further examination CONKLIN proved that he was right regarding the horse.

The examination into the charge of piracy and attempted murder of HIRAM MCKENNON, second mate of the British bark Manitoba, preferred against Wm. Martinell, John McDonald, Jeremiah Fitzpatrick, Thos. Shea, Thos. Walsh, Chas. Carr, Robert Walsh and Thos. Wood, seamen belonging to the vessel, was resumed yesterday before United States Commissioner WHITE. Mr. McKENNON, first mate, testified to the facts as already published, and the case was adjourned till this morning.

At a church sociable and reception in the Methodist Episcopal Church, corner of Lexington-avenue and Fifty-second-street, last evening, the pastor, Rev. R. M. STRATTON, gave an interesting account of his visit to the Pacific coast, and of his observations among the Mormons. Several ladies and gentlemen entertained the company with songs and music, refreshments were bountifully provided, and the evening passed away very pleasantly.

Yesterday afternoon the reception tendered by the teachers and pupils of Grammar-school No. 40, on Twenty-third street, between Second and Third avenues, took place in the large hall of the school, which was crowded to overflowing. J. W. GERARD presented two handsome gold medals to Masters C. SACKETT CHELLBORG and JOSEPH A. BOURKE as a reward for good deportment throughout the season.

The Elevated Railway Company, in Greenwich-street, are building a number of new cars and engines to place on their route. As soon as they are completed, the officers say they will erect seven way-stations between Dey and Twenty-ninth streets, and run every half hour. They are now making nine trips a day, in connection with the Hudson River Railroad, running the distance of three miles in fifteen minutes.

PHILLIP J. DONNELLY, who keeps a saloon at No. 110 West-street, was arraigned, yesterday, before Justice HOGAN, at the Tombs Police Court, upon the complaint of MICHAEL F. DALTON, of New-Brighton, Staten Island, that DONNELLY, having stupefied him with drugged beer, had stolen from his pockets gold coin and currency to the amount of $18. The accused was committed for trial at the General Sessions.

This morning the magnificent pleasure boat the Dreadnought, will be formerly delivered by steamer to College Point, Long Island, for the use of the recently established Dreadnought Club. The following are her proportions: length, 30 feet; beam, 3 feet 10 inches; depth, 15 inches; pulls four oars; is built of Spanish cedar, and has brass knees.

If you take a Fourth-avenue car above Forty-second-street going down, you have to pay 5 cents fare. Then if you wish to go to the Thirty-fourth-street ferry by their branch track, you have to pay 6 cents more. Going up, you have to pay only 5 cents all the way to the ferry. A correspondent calls attention to this absurd diversity.

The grand fountain in the Central Park, facing the lake, is now only waiting for the large bronze female figure designed by Miss STRANAHAN, and which is intended to surmount the shaft of gray stone already placed in position. The figure is on its way from Europe. It represents the "Angel Stirring the Waters."

Yesterday Mr. BERGH received communications from L. F. MELLER, Secretary of the Northern Ohio Relief Association, Cleveland, and from Mr. E. H. FITCH, of Toledo, Ohio, asking for information and advice, with the view of organizing associations for the prevention of cruelty to animals. Already seventeen States have societies in full working order.

WESTON, the pedestrian, commences a walk of 400 miles, in five consecutive days—112 to be accomplished the first day—at the Empire Skating Rink, June 19. He has been in training since Dec. 26, and is under the charge of Drs. DORMUS, FLINT and MOTT, and Mr. WOODY, of the Young Men's Christian Association Gymnasium.

Dr. JAMES SWENEY, of No. 28 Mott-street, was found yesterday morning on the sidewalk in front of No. 67 Bowery, insensible from the effects of laudanum. He was taken to the Eldridge-street Police Station, where he fully recovered, and left without making any explanation.
